Everything old is new again!

It didn't seem possible! Summer vacation had flown by much too quickly, and it was time to start yet another school year. But gone it was, and any time before noon seemed just too early to wake up-especially for school.

However, complaining about it would not make summer longer, so whether it was by bus, car or bicycle, students and teachers traveled to school for the start of the new year.

From the ringing of the 7:40 bell on Aug. 22, seniors and underclassmen felt the school had taken on a new charm. The old halls were the same, but there was a refreshed feeling in the atmosphere. It seemed as if EVERYTHING OLD ... WAS NEW AGAIN!

Students saw old friends in the halls and cafeteria before school for the first time since summer recess and noticed changes about each other. Some had grown an inch or two, others had new braces and some had new hair styles.

Whatever the change, it all added to the "old, but new again feeling" which was experienced the first days of school and throughout the school year.

New policies address needs

Along with the start of the year brought new policies and classes which catered to the students' needs and problems.

Those people involved in extra-curricular activities such as sports, music, clubs or publications were affected by the new drinking and drug pledge.

The pledge was made mainly to inform parents that if students in these activities were caught under the influence of alcohol or drugs they would not be able to participate in any activities. They could also risk being expelled from school.

Another new policy for an old problem put into effect was the new tardy policy. In each of the students' classes they were allowed three tardies, but on the fourth tardy the student would spend one full day in in-school suspension.

"I think this will work after awhile," said freshman Chris Janke. "Some kids just don't take it seriously, but they get the message after the fourth tardy," added Chris.

A new program which reached the high school level this year was the IDEA program which was aimed at "Increasing Depth Education Abilities." These gifted students involved in IDEA attended either Southport or Keystone Middle School, and had been involved since their seventh grade year.

In November a team of 17 teachers from around the state visited Southport for a week to evaluate the educational and extra-curricular programs for the North Central Association.

Southport has been a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools since 1948.

New policies and improvements made the all-important education in school new again.

School spirit was shown in many ways. Booster Club posted a sign to beat Perry at the Falcon Fry.

Journal editor Kim Parker checks over copy during fifth period. The Journal staff produced a total of 15 papers during the year.

Sonja Mahone, Angie Gentry and Kelly Miller model the new fall looks such as leather pants and bright shoes.

"Preppie models" Shelley Pflum and Lisa Sanders, seniors, show the look of button-down oxfords, crew neck and cardigan sweaters.

Duck shoes, closed toe sandals and a variety of leather shoes are just a few examples of the different shoes walking the halls.

Stylishly strutting, seniors Dave McCaslin and Debbie Moeller show the ever popular purple.

If one were to compare a photograph of the new fashions students were wearing to a photo of the popular styles 30 or 40 years ago, there may be some problem deciding which one was more recent.

Long-waisted dresses of the 20s as well as the 50s look with peddle pushers and mini-skirts were new again.

Several of the "old and new again" styles were seen on girls and guys alike. The 50s look of pin-stripe pants and jeans, thin ties and sleeveless t-shirts were a few of the examples.

"A lot of the fashions from the 30s and 40s movies are coming back in style. I really like that since I am an old movie buff," said junior Melissa Straubinger.

Earrings were another fashion factor for guys as well as girls. Big, colorful earrings inspired by the 30s style were worn by the girls, while those guys with pierced ears wore smaller more simple posts. "I think earrings add to a style for guys as well as girls," said senior Debbie Moeller.

The "flashdance" look was in as students were cutting off the sleeves and collars of their old sweat shirts. Others spent money just to buy the worn-out sweat shirt look.

No matter what the style, fashion accessories were a must to "make" the outfit. Bandanas, pumps, wide belts and oversize bags were a few of these special touches which added to that "old yet new again feeling."

School spirit renewed

Despite the slow start, school spirit was on the uphill again.

After the first dance was canceled due to the extra long football game, the annual Falcon Fry was planned. For the first time in two years, no rain was present.

Spirited crowds cheered and roared as football team members threw an artificial replica of a Perry football player in the fire.

As homecoming week approached, the spirit became more and more evident, leading up to a large crowd turnout at the game.

The Halloween season approached, and so did the plan of the Halloween Monster Mash, sponsored by the Booster Club.

"I think the Halloween party was the best one this school has had in a long time," said Booster Club Vice President Tony Vittorio.

Other groups around the school also helped to boost spirit. A girls' powder-puff football game was added. Each class formed a team and played against the other classes.

Theatre and drama clubs participated in many activities and were quick to praise other groups.

Many groups got involved in special ways, such as the Art Club which sponsored its first jack-o-lantern contest.

To boost the spirit of the crowd, head football Coach Gary Demes, along with the Booster Club officers, Jeanne Allgor, Darin Badger and Tony Vittorio give a hardy pep talk at the Falcon Fry.

Even though school, homework and jobs took up much of the students' time, they still found a few spare hours to fill however they chose.

According to senior Brian Fulp, many students played gym hockey at the Troy Boys' Club. "I always wanted to play hockey, but never got the chance to skate. Gym hockey is the closest thing to real hockey," said Brian.

Shopping was an old favorite for a weekend afternoon, but changing fads and styles made the experience as new as ever.

Greenwood Park Mall was the site for many area students to shop and browse. "Shopping gives me an idea of the fashions, and I just love spending whatever money I have," said senior Suzanne Cummings.

While area students mainly shopped on the southside, northern community students were found at malls closer to home.

According to sophomore Shelley Turner, many northern community students shopped at Glendale and Lafayette Square. "My favorite shops are Lazarus and 16 plus," said Shelley.

Movies were another "old, yet new again" way students spent their free time. "Risky Business" and "Flashdance" were popular according to students. "I went and saw 'Flashdance' three times," said senior Laura Duvall.

Free time may be an old phrase, but the many ways students filled it gave it a whole new meaning.

Changes flow into fall

Autumn brought with it colorful leaves, football, homecoming, carved pumpkins and apples. However, to each traditional aspect the season brought was added a new touch.

To sports fans, autumn would not be autumn without football. Friends would get together for a game of touch football, and others would gather around the tube to cheer on their favorite college or pro teams to victory.

But on Oct. 25, the four classes were cheering for teams in the first powder-puff football game. Julie Andrews, junior, said, "We had a blast! I think we should have even more games next year!"

Along with the football season came homecoming festivities. This year the Booster Club officers gave the event a whole new aura. The pre-game parade and the acknowledgment of past all-state athletes during halftime gave this homecoming a new, unique effect.

Adding to the effect was the marching band. Under the direction of new band director Mr. Max Jones, the band marched during the parade, pre-game and halftime in its new corps style.

Halloween brought ghosts, goblins and jack-o-lanterns. This year the Art Club sponsored its first pumpkin-carving contest.

Autumn also brings with it caramel and candied apples, apple pie and apple cider. As a fund-raiser the cheerleaders picked apples at the Anderson Apple Orchard in Mooresville.

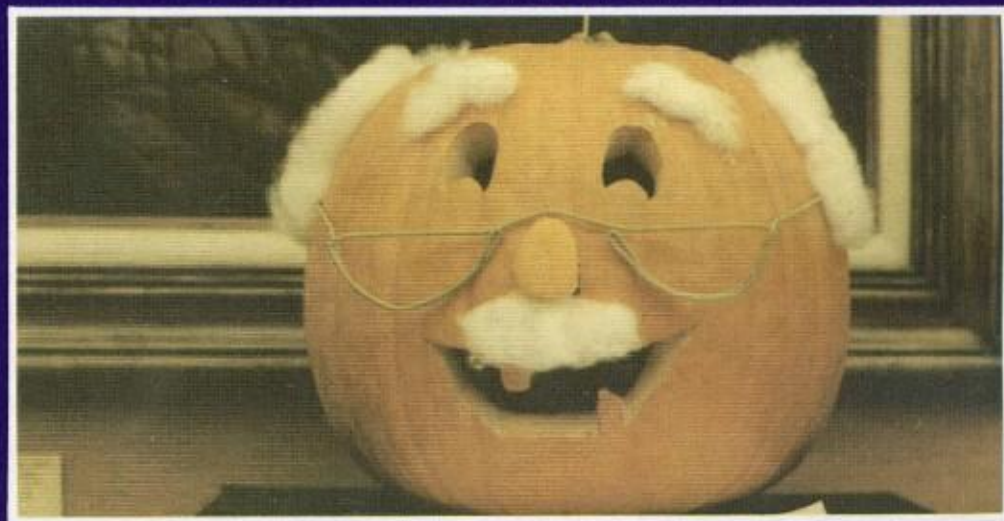

"We sold them to teachers, students and anybody who wanted to buy," said varsity cheerleader April Haase. According to April, the money raised would be used for new uniforms.

Old building, new look!

Perhaps the most notable example of how EVERYTHING OLD IS NEW AGAIN is Southport High School itself.

When Southport was commissioned a high school in 1894 it offered two years of work. There was a graduating class of six and a faculty of two.

Then in 1929, designed after the main structure at William and Mary College, Southport High School was erected in Homecroft. This is now the location of Southport Middle School.

Another move was made in 1958 when Southport moved to its present location to what had been the junior high.

According to Assistant Principal Mr. William Pickard, a freshman class was added which jumped enrollment to over 1600. New classrooms, a swimming pool and a gymnasium seating 7290 added to the major transition experienced.

Another addition was made in 1966 when the auditorium, seating 1200, a cafeteria twice the size of the old one, music facilities and 25 new classrooms were built onto the school.

Since January of 1983 construction was done on the auxiliary gym, olympic-size pool and new weight room. New lighted tennis courts were also added.

Such extreme changes in location, size, enrollment and construction were what made Southport, on its 90th birthday, new again.

— Jean Cunningham

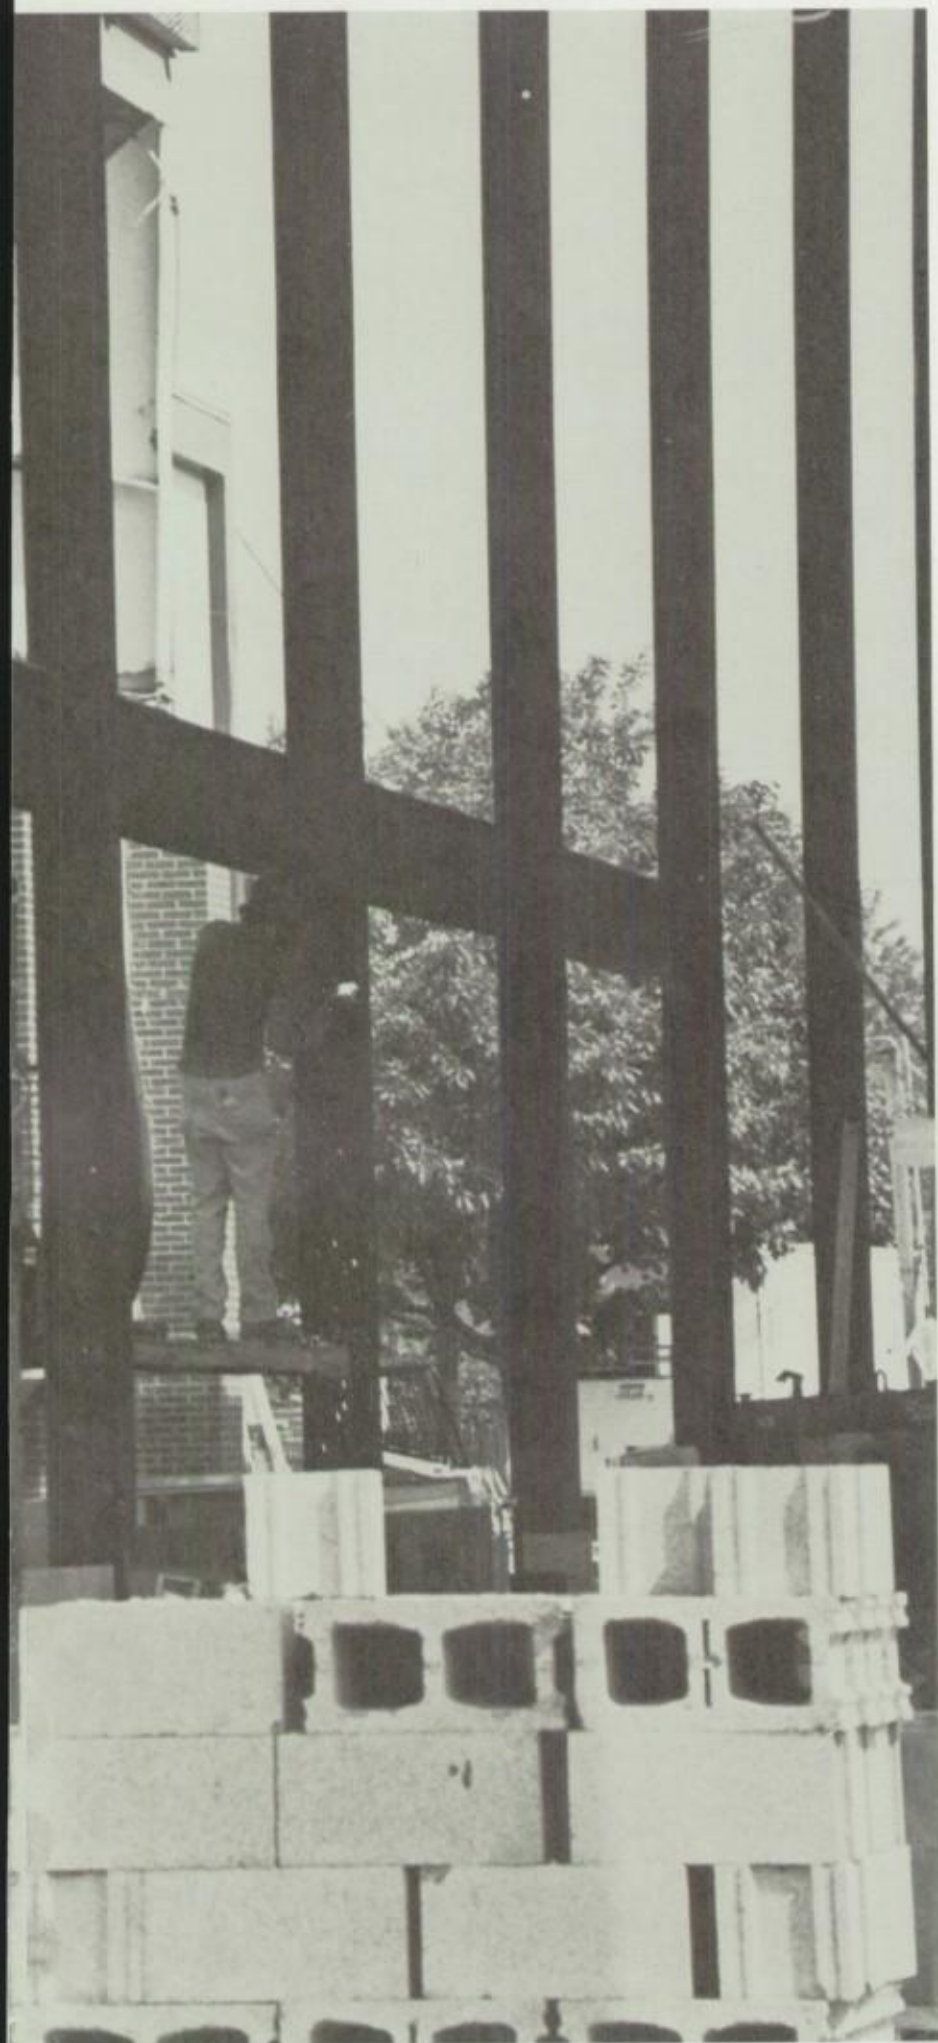

The original high school building was located in what is now Southport Middle School.

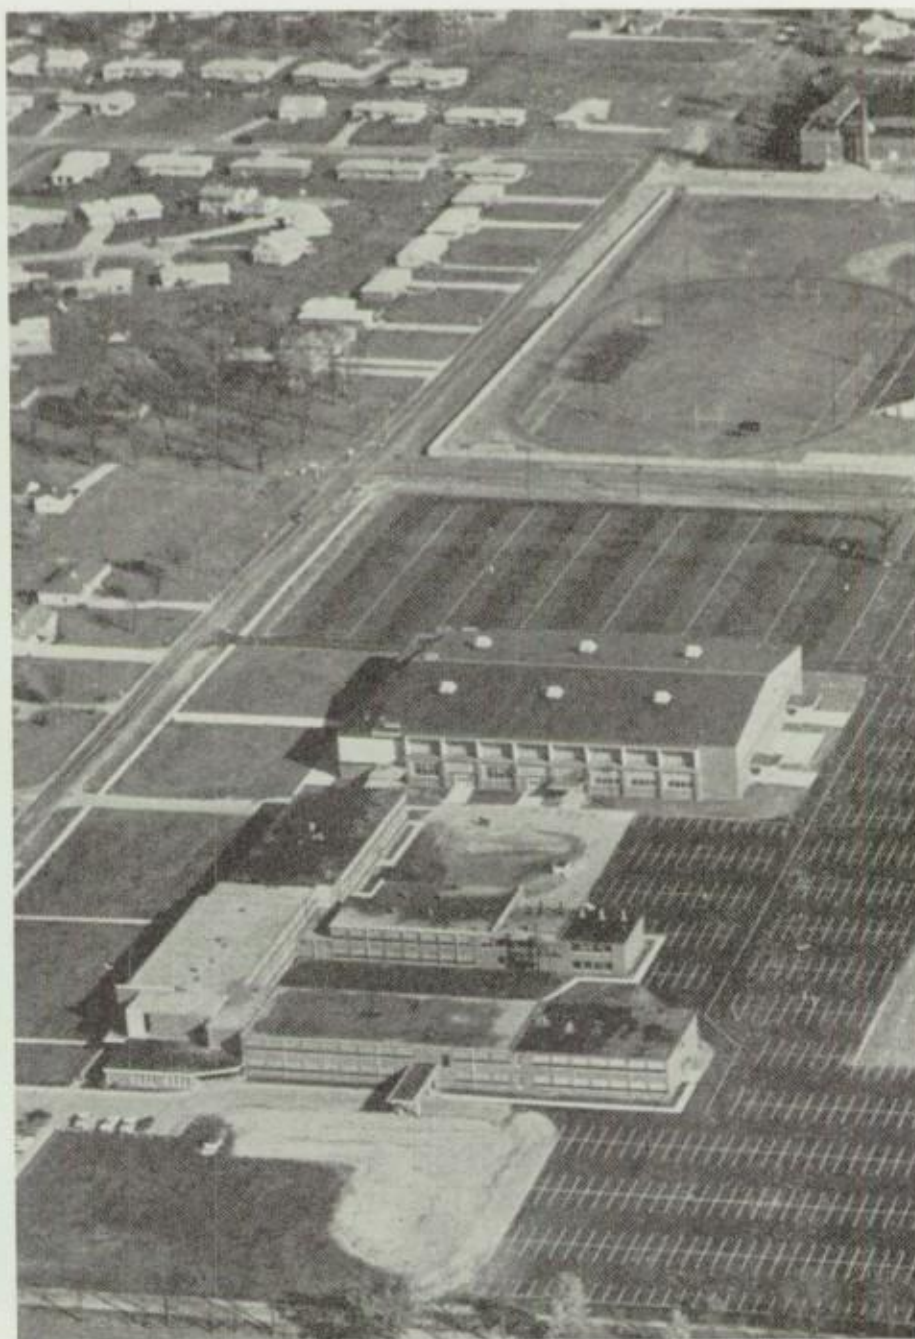

Construction began last spring on new facilities that should be completed during the summer of '84.

Both girls' and boys' sports members and fans awaited the new gym and pool while construction workers labored.

The 1960 school building was smaller in size but held only grades 10 through 12.

Old tradition new again

Elections and campaigns were very much a part of the old traditions which were made new again. Elections were held the spring before the officers took office.

Student Council and Booster Club nominees acted out comical skits for campaign publicity. According to Allan Danehy, one receives many strange looks while performing the skits.

"I remember how red Mrs. Mellander's face got when my Allentown skit performed in her homeroom." According to Allan, two members in his group performed in trench coats. At the end they opened their coats as flashers and were wearing full-length signs which said "Allantown: population 53." "The number 53 was my election number," Allan added.

The powder-puff football cheerleaders also presented an example of a comical new idea for the old tradition of cheerleaders. Boys representing each class dressed as girl cheerleaders and pepped the crowd and the teams up with their cheers and pyramids.

While the year was filled with school activities, current events also affected the students. From the bombing in Beirut and the invasion in Grenada to Tom Sneva's winning the 500, students were aware of world events as well as school news.

New site gives prom fresh change

The Egyptian Room in the Murat Temple made the 1983 prom the most successful one ever held, according to Mr. Ralph Brown, junior class sponsor. This was the first time the prom had ever been held anywhere aside from the SHS gymnasium or Greenwood Park Mall. "A real ballroom made the students more excited about the whole thing in general, and ticket sales were up considerably," commented Mr. Brown.

The prom was held on May 14, from 8 to 11. There were approximately 250 couples in attendance, many dressed in taffeta formals and white tuxedos.

There was a hush around the room when the big moment came to crown the king and queen. The girls selected John Money for king, and the boys chose Tina Shotts as queen.

The members of the king's court were Peter Miller, Steve Ritter, Mark Alberts, and David Gillespie. The queen's court included Sarah Adams, Roni Embry, Cindy Henson, Mary Ann Howell and Krista Metheny.

Musical sings to success

Many hours after school and hard work made the '83 spring musical, "The Wizard of Oz," a huge success, according to Miss Pamela Hoopingartner, director.

The familiar musical was based on the book by L. Frank Baum. It tells the story of Dorothy's (played by Jean Cunningham) adventures through the land of Oz. She is trying to find her way back home to Kansas.

During her journey she encounters many people including a Scarecrow (Sarah Adams), Tinman (Larry Manning), and Lion (Allan Danehy). The quartet continue on their journey to find the Wizard (Tom Truden).

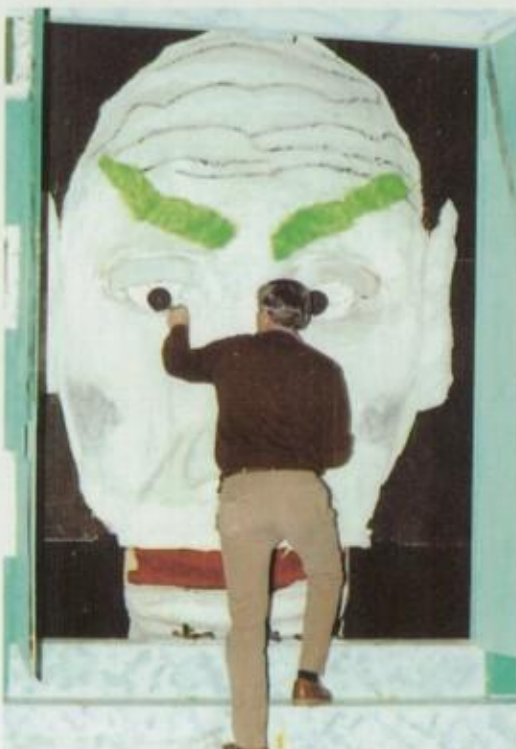

The 96 cast members, the largest in SHS history, included farmhands, munchkins, generals, ladies and dancers of Emerald City, castle guards, scarecrow dancers, ghosts and jitterbug dancers.

The cast was backed by the orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Candace Putz and DeAnn Gaither as concertmaster. Miss Linda Owen was in charge of the dramatics while Mrs. Audrey Toole and Mr. Phil Jackson sponsored the Stagecrafters.

"Walking out on curtain call and receiving standing ovations made the opening night a memorable occasion," said Jean.

Miss Owen "grays" Dean Gillingham's (Allan Danehy) hair. Mr. Jackson helps construct a set for the play before opening night.

Plays set in 50s

The fall play "Mother Is A Freshman" was held in the auditorium October 21 and 22.

The plot revolved around a girl wanting to go to college for her second year. She finds out the school gives a scholarship to any girl with the name of Abigail Fortitude. Her mother (Debbie Blight) happens to have that name. She decides to go to college on the scholarship to pay for herself and her daughter.

The plot thickens as the mother and daughter fall in love with the same professor (Brian Nichols).

The cast rehearsed the play for six weeks before opening night. They worked every school day except Fridays for two to three hours to memorize their lines.

"If you get into the character, it will feel like a regular rehearsal. You will realize the audience is out there, and you will play to them," said Debbie Blight.

Under the supervision of Mr. Phil Jackson and Mrs. Audrey Toole, the Stagecrafters made the sets and worked the lights and sound.

Miss Linda Owen was the director and supervisor of the play.

The stark setting of the '83 spring play, "12 Angry Jurors," consisted of a jury room with a black curtain, suspended window, and a table and chairs.

The plot involved a young boy who was accused of killing his father. The rest of the play revolved around the jurors. They discussed whether the boy was guilty or not guilty.

Juror #8 (Brian Nichols) and Juror #3 (Dave McCaslin) were the main characters in the play. All the cast put in many long hours of work to make the play a success.

Mr. Phil Jackson supervised the Stagecrafters on making the sets. They also worked the lights and the sound.

Miss Linda Owen was the director of the play. She also put in many long hours.

"It is really great to hear the audience clap to show they like it, but after the last curtain comes down, you feel really sad inside because it is all finished," said Brian Nichols.

Parade sparks new homecoming

Homecoming festivities on the chilly night of Oct. 14 began with a parade. Each class and club displayed banners and floats they had designed to the theme "Hail to Our Heroes." With the marching band leading the way, each of the queen candidates, court members and escorts rode in convertibles.

Despite a strong effort, the gridsters suffered a 42-7 defeat to Warren Central.

During halftime, the band performed their competition show, and many past All-State Athletes were recognized.

The float and banner awards were also announced. The juniors made the best class float. The banner competition was won by the Art Club. Russian and String Clubs followed.

The grand moment came for the crowning of the queen. From silence to a roar the crowd cheered as new queen Pam Bryant was crowned. Pam exclaimed, "It's such a good feeling. There would never be enough words to explain!"

Cheerleaders execute spirit

The 1983-84 school year brought many changes to the cheerleading squads.

Mrs. Charlene Milam, who had been the cheerleading sponsor for three years, retired from teaching.

Mrs. Vonda Horton replaced her as the new cheerleading sponsor. She had been a varsity cheerleader at Southport in 1962.

The cheerleaders were really excited after being chosen to represent the school.

"It was sheer joy when I heard my name on the announcements. I was really happy, glad, and I felt really energetic," said Kim Gentry, varsity cheerleader.

The Southport Jaycees donated money to the squads to help in buying new outfits. The cheerleaders planned to work at the Southport Elementary Festival in the elephant ear stand to show their thanks.

The varsity cheerleaders had several activities scheduled throughout the summer. They attended a cheerleader camp at Vincennes University for five days.

"We learned a lot of new cheers, chants, techniques, pyramids and spirit ideas during our stay at camp," said Laura Hiner, varsity cheerleader.

The girls held two car washes and competed in the Blocks Cheerleader Competition. In the competition they defeated Perry Meridian and Greenwood. For this victory they were awarded the first prize of $100.

"Everyone should get behind the attitude that we are winners, no matter if we win or lose," said Mrs. Horton. She was very pleased that she could be the sponsor of the girls. "Working with the girls has been my pleasure."

Performing requires dedication

"Dedication," said sponsor Miss Pam Hoopingarner, "is what it takes to be a drum major, Cardinalette, majorette, or a member of the rifle corps."

The groups practiced every day during homeroom and three days per week after school for approximately three hours, just to get ready for a Friday night performance.

Not only did the groups dance and twirl (flags, batons and rifles) during football and basketball seasons, they danced as tin soldiers in the Christmas concert and performed a dance in the spring Pops concert.

Junior Cardinalette Chris Adams said, "It's scary, and I get really nervous out on the field, but all of the practice time is really worthwhile."

Cardinalette captain Annie Skersick, senior, and co-captains Shelley Maher, senior, and Kim Everts, junior, choreographed the Cardinalette routines with a little help and support from

"Being a good Cardinalette takes a lot of time, effort, dedication and talent," said Annie.

Like the Cardinalettes, the majorettes and rifle corps also made up their own routines. Captain of the majorettes was Suzy Bower, senior, and rifle corps captain was Sheri Noel, senior.

Senior majorette Kathleen Boyle said, "It was really fun to make up our own routines, and since we're all such good friends, it makes it even more exciting!"

Leading the marching band were drum majors Gayle Baumer, senior, and Lisa Anderson, junior. The girls' major duties were directing the band during performances, teaching drills, aiding in running practices and representing the band.

"It's scary being in charge on the field, but I love it! It's so exciting to see the results of the band's hard work," said Gayle.

Out of breath from a performance, the unit marches off the field.

Marching precisely, the band forms a circle in their competition/half-time show.

Band marches to a new beat!

"We are a class act!" commented Mr. Max Jones, director of the music department and marching band, referring to the band's new style.

A more exciting, yet conservative style came to Southport. Mr. Jones referred to it as a "classy" look because of their "corps" style of marching, like the military. Classical music opened all shows, another addition to prepare the unit for competition.

Mr. Jones and assistant Mr. Eric Chandler, both new directors, brought the change to the musicians. Mr. Jones came from Winchester High School. Under his direction, the Winchester band won several state championships.

Intensely studying to make marching perfection, Mr. Max Jones prepares the marchers for a pre-game show at an Indiana State University football game.

Mr. Chandler graduated from Ball State University in 1983. He said, "I came to Southport because of its well-known music program, and it has a lot of potential. I also wanted to work with Mr. Jones."

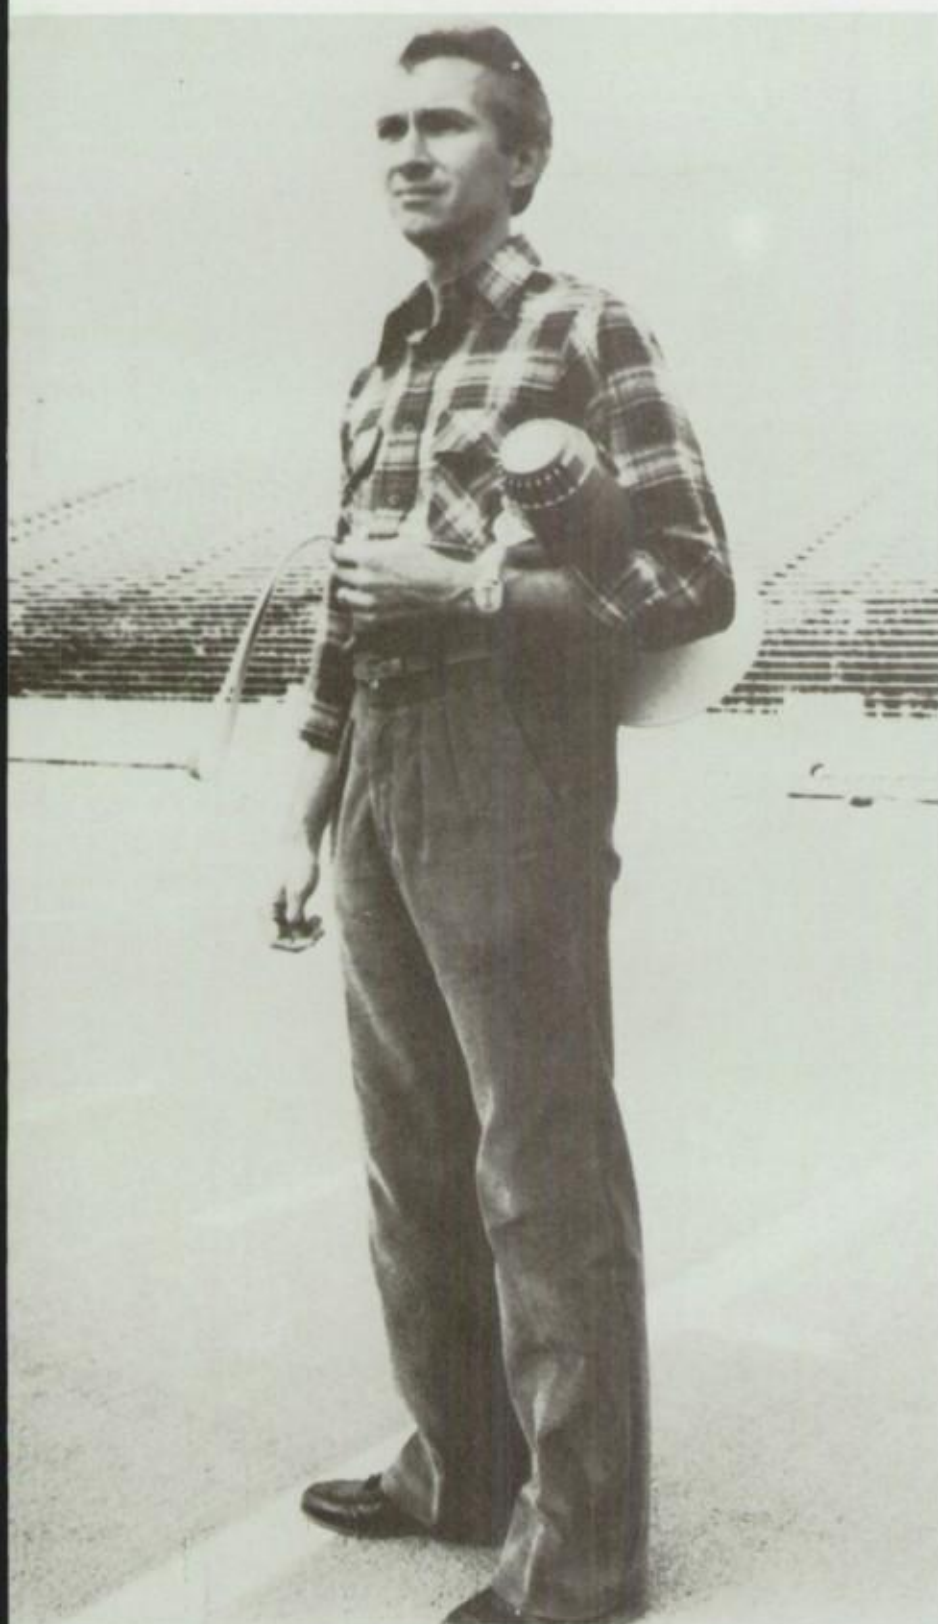

The marching season lasts about as long as football season. The practice usually consumes a varied amount of time, approximately 10 hours a week after school.

Aside from the home football games, the group also marched in the homecoming parade, the Veteran's Day parade, a pre-game show at Indiana State University and the Indianapolis 500 parade.

Senior Lisa Marquette, band captain, said, "It was really hard adjusting to the new methods and techniques. However, in the long run, the band really benefited. Even late hours and long practices in the rain all paid off."

Anchor creates lasting memories

"You guys stop talking and get to work! Your spreads are due this Friday!" was a frequent request from adviser Mrs. Mary Jungemann.

Many long hours were put into the making of the 1984 Anchor. Between drawing layouts, looking at contact sheets and writing copy the staff kept very busy. There were deadlines to meet and pictures that had to be taken, and it all took place from April of '83 to mid-February.

During the summer, five staff members attended the High School Journalism Institute at Indiana University. They learned how to create mosaic layouts, strong leads, sharp photographs, and, most importantly, learned how to develop the theme.

After two weeks of year-book staff members were ready to head for home and start on deadlines for the 1984 book.

"I had a great time at camp, even though I was tired. I learned so much about the making of a year-book, and I met so many people with the same interest as I, the urge to construct a good yearbook," said Lisa Fall, activities editor.

Outside of school the staff socialized at the publications Christmas party. They also sold an ad to Expo Bowl and were treated to three free games.

"The staff worked together cooperatively throughout the year and we really had some great ideas," said Jean Cunningham, assistant editor.

Journal requires skills

Brainstorming, writing and editing were a few tasks which went into the production of each of the 15 issues of the Journal.

However, certain skills were acquired before the staff printed its first issue, according to Kim Parker, editor-in-chief. Four staffers attended the High School Journalism Institute at Indiana University over the summer.

"I learned so much more at camp because I got a chance to use the skill I had acquired already in Journalism I and II," said Kim.

Each issue was designed through a routine which began with the brainstorm session. The entire staff met during fifth period to discuss possible story ideas two weeks before the actual issue would be distributed.

From here the assistant editors planned interviews, wrote copy and researched their stories.

While editors and assistant editors made and received assignments, photographers were also given assignments. In essence, photographers had to work for all sections of the paper.

When copy and pictures were finished they were checked by the editors and the adviser, Mrs. Mary Jungemann. Corrections were made and the copy and pictures were then sent to Alexander Typesetting to be typeset and printed.

Every other Wednesday before the paper was issued, the staff went to Alexander's and pasted up the pages. "At first it took a long time to paste up pages, but as time went on it took less and less," said Noel Chessman, Opinion assistant editor.

The paper was printed, distributed to all students and faculty during homeroom every other Friday, and the process started all over again.

Student Council plans activities

"We like to promote school spirit like the Booster Club does. Everything we do concerns school more than sports, like the Christmas dance, flower sales, Pride Week, etc.," commented Student Council treasurer Cathy Daus.

Student Council planned and promoted a back-to-school soc-hop and a Christmas dance. They also sold homecoming mums, Valentine carnations and booster buttons.

From these money-making projects, they bought academic award plaques in place of letter sweaters and awarded a $100 academic scholarship.

For new activities, the group spent several months planning "SHS Pride Week" along with the Booster Club staff and Human Relations committee. They were also in charge of the Valentine queen convocation and making the daily birthday announcements.

Student Council president Scott Opsahl, junior, said, "It was exciting being a part of planning the activities instead of just attending them."

Although the officers, and their sponsor, assistant principal Mr. Dan Bolin, did the actual planning, there were also 67 homeroom representatives who helped carry out various activities.

"Student Council is necessary for all schools because it adds activities other than class work and sports," said Scott.

Being crazy and clever are keys to winning Booster Club elections. Tony Vittorio and Darin Badger won with the help of Shawn Steimel, using the slogan "Badge to the Bone."

"We wanted to be Booster Club officers because we noticed school spirit was dropping from the lack of planning activities, so we decided to run for an office. It is definitely worth the time we spend," commented Tony Vittorio and Darin Badger, vice president and president.

Up until this year, many students agreed spirit was declining. But, due to the hard work done by the Booster Club officers and staff, spirit began to rise.

The credit went to the club's new activities which included a Halloween costume party, a faculty basketball game and their part in the SHS Pride Week, a week of promoting pride in the student body, in conjunction with the Human Relations committee.

The club's activities included planning of homecoming, the Falcon Fry, class competition events, pep sessions, and P.A. announcements recognizing student accomplishments.

"I think the Booster Club's old activities are just as important as the new ones. Maybe they're more important, knowing people look forward to them every year

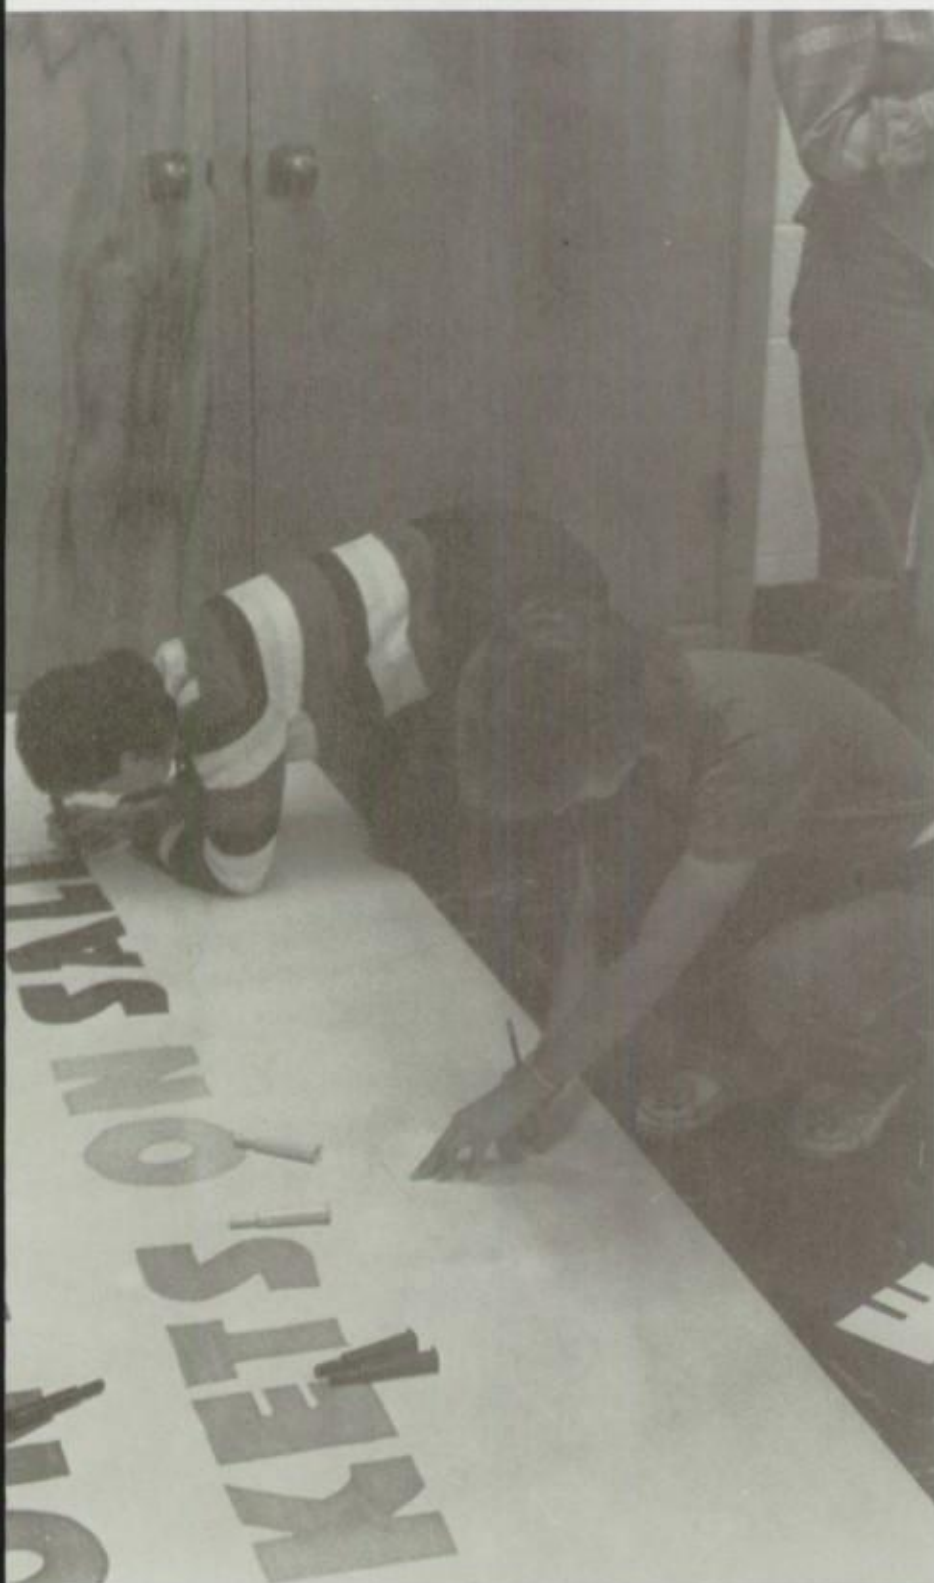

... like Christmas!" commented Gretchen Wagner, a junior staff member.

The club's officers are elected the preceding school year in April by the student body. The officers for 1983-1984 were Darin Badger, president; Tony Vittorio, vice president; Jeanne Allgor, secretary; and Amy Burge, treasurer. There were eight staff members, all juniors and seniors.

Sponsor Mrs. Georgia Stumpf said, "The perfect staff is an unreality, but in reality, that is very close to what I have right now!"

Select members perform

Visiting different places seemed to be the highlight of playing in the Swinging Strings, according to its members. "I love to play for other people than just those here at school. With Swinging Strings, we can go different places," said Alice Starks, senior cellist.

The group performed at several of the same places they had in the past, including the Homecroft Christmas Breakfast and several PTA meetings.

For new performances, the musicians traveled to several nursing homes during the Christmas season to perform with the Southport Singers. They also played background music for the homecoming queen pageant.

Junior violinist DeAnn Gaither said, "I like going to the nursing homes because I think elderly people sometimes tend to feel left out and forgotten. Playing for them during the holidays shows that we really do care and that they are never forgotten."

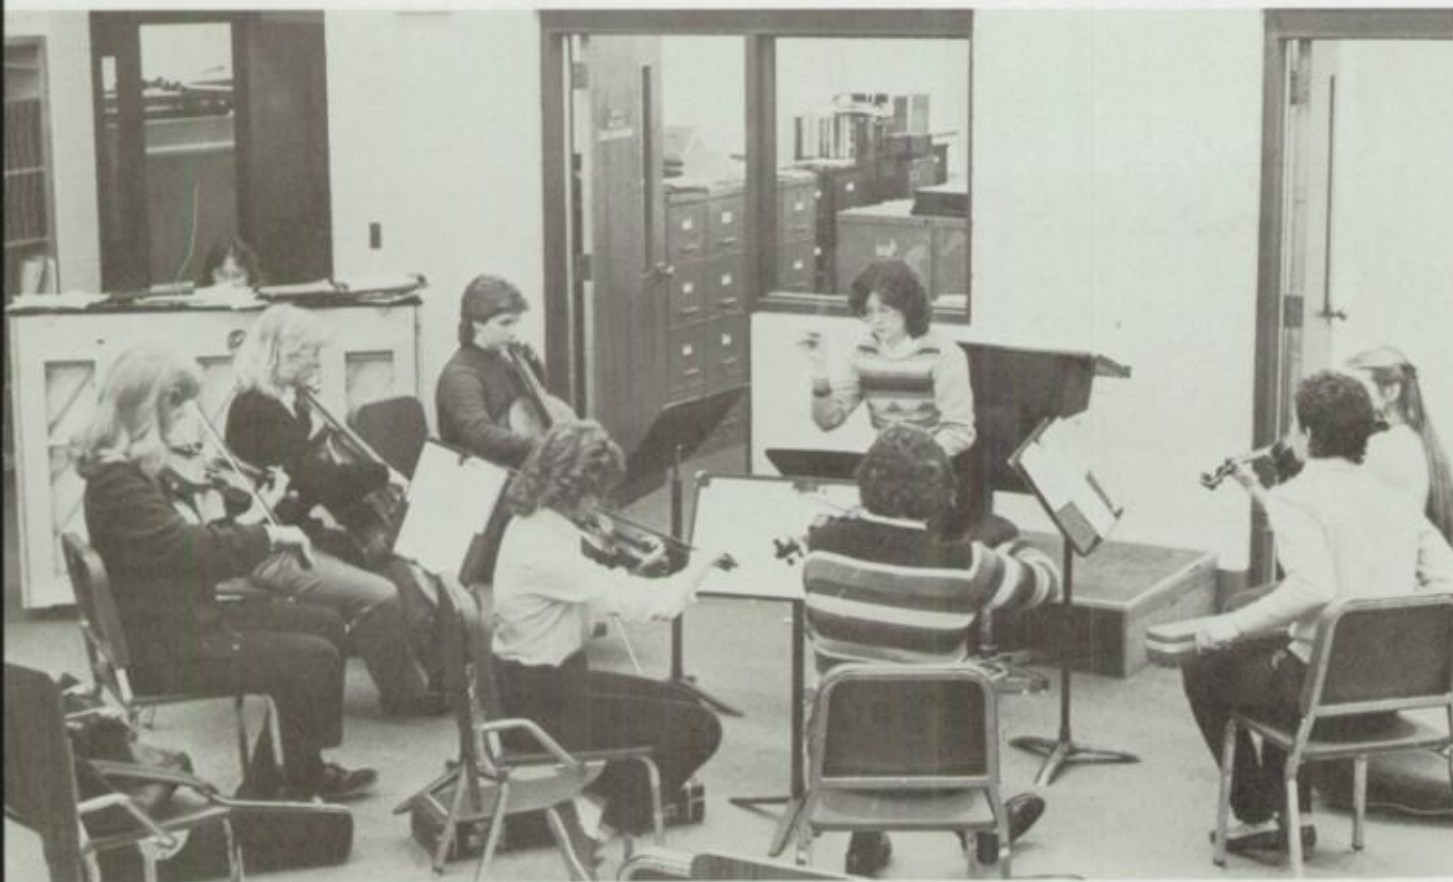

The group, composed of select string players, was under the direction of first year teacher Miss Ellen Robison, a Butler University graduate.

"I have found Southport to have an extremely supportive faculty and a highly-motivated student body. The Swinging Strings has provided me with an opportunity to work with some of the most excellent music students in the school," said Miss Robison.

Striving for perfection, junior DeAnn Gaither practices her violin after school for a performance.

Swinging String members rehearse "We Wish You a Merry Christmas" to be played in performance with the Southport Singers at Christmas.

Members sharing interest in strings

"Playing violin is my hobby, and I enjoy the opportunity to meet other people with the same interests I have. String Club is one way for me to meet them," said Shari Snyder, treasurer of the String Club.

String Club members all had the same thing in common: they play stringed instruments. The club was one way for them to share their interests.

Tiffany Crain, secretary of the club, said, "Everyone has ambitions to fulfill. My ambition is to interpret what the composer has written to the best of my ability."

During the course of the year, the 29-member club had several activities. Some of them included guest soloists, a Christmas party, a solo and ensemble recital, and the planning of the annual orchestra banquet.

"I like the guest soloists and speakers that came to our meetings. They gave us an idea of what it's like to be a professional musician," commented Alice Starks, the club's president.

Sponsor Miss Ellen Robison said, "Not only does String Club provide the opportunity for engaging in social activities, but it introduces the music students to performing artists and speakers."

Competing against students from other schools was what the speech team members accomplished at a speech meet. They were taught the basic skills of speech and prepared for many future speaking presentations.

Interested drama students, performing and future actors and actresses were among those who joined Theater Club.

"Whether we have an audience of 5 or 500 people, it's worth the effort to perform, as long as they're having a good time," said Toni Campbell, club member.

The Theater Club performed for Beech Grove Health Care Center in December.

Performing for clubs in school or organizations outside of school was what Readers Theater achieved. They performed a short fable for Spanish Club and an all-female version of Romeo and Juliet for Seniority. Their biggest performance was before the American Association of University Women.

To become a Thespian, students had to earn points by working in a school production or by working backstage.

The Thespian Club is an international honorary organization for students who have earned 10 points, each point representing 10 hours of work.

Stagecrafters participated in a number of activities. They made the new entryway for the Christmas dance and received five dollars for their entry in the Student Council Christmas stocking competition.

Stagecrafters past and present went to work in the Southport Community Theater program which was opened to anyone interested in production or set design. A production has been scheduled for late summer.

Students honored with membership

Honor clubs are composed of students who often work hard to improve and apply their knowledge.

One such club is the National Honor Society (NHS), which began its SHS chapter in 1945. The student's high school record is reviewed to determine who will be accepted for membership, which is based on character, scholarship, leadership and service to the school.

The NHS sponsors are Mrs. Betty Stevens and Mrs. Janet Stumpf. Mrs. Stevens, who has been a sponsor since 1968, said, "I find satisfaction in being part of the highest honor club possible in high school."

Lisa Marquette, NHS member, said, "Being a member of the National Honor Society was a goal of mine since my freshman year. Now that I'm a member, it makes me feel good knowing I'm a member of such an exclusive society."

Since 1975 at SHS, Quill and Scroll has been recognizing students with superior ability in high school publications.

Prospective members must be ranked in the top one-third of their class and be recommended by the publications adviser.

Mrs. Mary Jungemann, Quill and Scroll sponsor and adviser of SHS publications said, "We were very active this year compared to previous years, but it's only a start. Students involved in publications are always so busy and involved in other activities, it's hard to find time for yet another."

Quill and Scroll members were involved with preparing a slide show presentation for freshmen orientation classes and eighth graders. "We're trying to expose SHS publications to underclassmen, and possibly get them interested in them," said Kris Muller, chairman of the slide presentation committee.

"Being in Quill and Scroll could help my chances of getting a journalism scholarship for college," said Kris.

Belonging means helping

Helping others and serving the school are often reasons students belong to clubs such as Boys' and Girls' State, Cardinals in Action and Seniority.

Cardinals in Action was a group of students concerned about the growing problem of teenage drunk driving and drug abuse.

Aside from club meetings, the students, sponsored by Mrs. Pat Stanley, put up bulletin boards and attended drug/alcohol seminars.

Angie Bashenow, junior member, said, "The seminars are very interesting. The speakers are often celebrities, and they really know their subject. It's hard to believe how many teens are killed by drunk driving accidents and drug overdoses."

Another club serving Southport was Seniority.

Senior girls made up the club, with sponsors Mrs. Betty Stevens and Mrs. Janet Stumpf.

Activities included visits from professional women such as models and photographers.

Club vice president Pam Bryant commented, "It's a good way for the senior girls to do something together before graduating."

During the month of June, nine seniors went to Boys' and Girls' State to learn about the Indiana state government at Indiana State University.

"At Girls State I learned that some people are naturally leaders. However, anyone can be a leader by expressing your opinion and being yourself," said Gayle Baumer, representative.

Athletes combine to discuss sports

FCA Fellowship of Christian Athletes helped each other by strengthening their individual sport, their life, and their Christian faith.

"I enjoy being part of this organization, but I don't enjoy the lack of participation. I feel the students are missing out," said girls' sponsor Miss Marilyn Ramsey.

One of the many activities of the Girls' FCA was an evening of racquetball at Racquets Four. They also went Christmas caroling through some Southport neighborhoods and had a bookout.

"We talk freely about what we feel. I think we learn more about life than you do in most of the other clubs," said sophomore Tracy Humbles.

The Boys' FCA, sponsored by Mr. Dennis Bruce, occasionally met before school.

"I've learned that athletes can show others they are Christian athletes by the way they act on the field," said sophomore Scott Dean.

A goal of both FCA clubs was to better its members' understanding of themselves and God, while teaching them to share themselves and God's love with others.

The only requirement for FCA membership was to be a member of an approved athletic team or to have tried out for one of the teams.

The Lettermen's Club was organized for the purpose of helping the administration in carrying out the many tasks needed for sponsoring of home athletic events.

The club consisted of those boys who have received the block sweater as an award.

Clubs build on creative talents

Students often join clubs to extend their learning experiences in certain subject areas. Some of those clubs are the Photo, Art, Chef, Future Home Builders and Auto clubs.

"I joined the Auto Club to learn how to work on my car. It's getting so expensive for car repairs. It's nice to know how to do it myself," said Carina Wallace, senior Auto Club member.

The Auto Club, led by sponsor Mr. Bruce Hatcher, saw films, hosted speakers and learned about racing cars and car maintenance.

The club's major activity was the Autorama. Club members set up the rules and judging of the cars entered by club members and non-members.

President Mike Walton said, "I like drag racing and eventually I will race. Auto Club is a way for me to learn about race cars."

Future Home Builders, (FHB), spent a lot of time trying new foods and ways of serving them at their club meetings. They practiced their new skills by having the annual Faculty Christmas Tea.

FHB sponsor Mrs. Helen Southwood said, "I think students join FHB to practice their skills for entertaining and to learn more about families and home life. The club enriches their lives more than there's time for in class."

The Photo Club spent many club meetings learning about cameras, what makes good photos and darkroom techniques.

During the Christmas season they traveled downtown for a five-hour field trip. Junior member Rick Neidenberger said, "I learned how to observe people, their expressions and when to capture them in a picture."

With sponsor Mrs. Wanda Springer, the Chef's Club consisted of boys who had or were taking Foods and Nutrition. The boys spent their club meetings cooking and hosting speakers from local restaurants such as Southport Noble Romans.

On two Saturdays, the Art Club took field trips. Last fall the group visited art galleries and shopped in Nashville. In the spring, they visited the Indianapolis Museum of Art.

Sponsor Mr. Roger Gale led the club meetings which consisted of films and slides brought by special speakers such as Captain Cartoon.

Art Club member Suzannah Schaefer said, "I like belonging to Art Club because I can learn more about people and art, rather than from a book in a class."

Clubs bring culture into student life

Participating in activities that pertain to a culture is what the Latin, French and Spanish Clubs are all about.

Celebrating by exchanging gifts and wishing each other well is how the Latin Club celebrated Saturnali.

Saturnali is the winter festival in Roman times celebrated during the week of Dec. 17-24. It combines the holidays of Thanksgiving and New Year.

The club also had a spring banquet in which the members dressed up in costumes and brought in a dish for a pitch-in-dinner.

Singing, dancing, sampling different types of food and bullfighting were all part of Spanish Club.

Mr. Terry Rice, co-sponsor, has taught Spanish for the last 13 years.

"The main purpose of the club is to show the part of Spanish culture that we can't do in class," said Mr. Rice.

"It makes you a better rounded person to know about other cultures around the world," said vice-president Lilly Burns.

When asked about the best meeting he had ever had, Mr. Rice said, "The best meeting I had was when a member of the club dressed up as a bull and acted out a bullfight."

Singing, eating and performing were activities the French Club did at their Christmas party.

Jeopardy was one of the many activities the club participated in during their monthly meetings which took place in room 160.

"I'm really glad that I'm a member of French Club. I enjoy meeting new people and French Club gave me that chance," said French Club President Greg Layne.

Members explore domestic lifestyles

Gaining knowledge to advance one's culture was a part of what the Foreign Student, German and Russian Clubs did.

The Foreign Exchange students who visited this year were Henrik Andersson from Sweden, Jens Boegner of Denmark and Suzannah Schaefer from Germany. They talked to club members about life in Europe and how their cultures differed from American culture.

At the German Club's first meeting the members tasted German food.

Eating borscht, Russian bread and cabbage rolls were among the choices of food at the Russian Club's spring dinner. The club also had a Russian faculty Christmas Tea Party. Russian tea and tea cakes were served, and Mrs. Janet Stumpf spoke to the members about Russian antiques.

"It was really fun having the faculty Christmas tea. The food was very good and learning about Russian antiques was interesting," said vice president Amy Plumer.

Activities spark academic clubs

Extending one's knowledge is often a reason students joined clubs that lead to careers in professional fields. Some of the clubs students joined were the Math, Business, Phy-Chem and Medicii clubs.

The Math Club's main purpose was extending the students' knowledge and appreciation of mathematics, according to its sponsor, Mr. John Snepp. In doing this, the club hosted speakers, played mind games and studied math history.

Jeff Wooden, the club's vice-president said, "I think all of our members really liked playing calculator games. They were really challenging."

Business Club members hosted speakers from business such as American Fletcher National Bank. According to Mr. Paul Benning, the club's sponsor, the meetings were a good way for students to learn about the business world outside class.

During Phy-Chem Club meetings, members presented experiments, hosted guest speakers and took a field trip to Eli Lilly's Visitors Center.

"The kids join to fulfill their desire to see and hear working scientists through club activities that they wouldn't see otherwise," said sponsor Mr. Victor Kerlin.

The highlight of the Medicii Club's year, according to its officers, was the emergency medical technicians' demonstration in the spring.

Medicii president Annette Dearing said, "I want to be a nurse, hopefully in an oncology unit. The club really helps me to understand more about health care."

Out-of-school trips enjoyed by clubs

Learning different skills to better their abilities is what the members of Spelunking, Model Rocketry, Chess and Outdoor Life Clubs did.

Spelunking members learned the techniques of caving and about the different kinds of caves and formations. They also discussed the numerous caves in the state and around the country.

Dave Magee, sophomore, said, "From previous experience, I have spent several hours in caves, so when I heard the school had a club I joined."

Students in Model Rocketry Club built rockets and had a rocket launch. They saw a movie to learn the basics of rocket safety and various stages of flight.

The Chess Club members competed against each other at the club meetings. The members were ranked on a ladder to see how their standings were against other members of the club. Members of the Chess Team, which consisted of club members, competed against other high school teams.

Members of Outdoor Life improved their skills in fishing and shooting by practicing on field trips such as their early spring trip to Camp Atterbury in Edinburg, Indiana.

Mike Hittel, sophomore, said, "It's fun to get together with others who like the outdoors. It's more of an enjoyment club than a learning club."

Requireds a fact of life

With electives, students were able to choose courses that suited their needs, but it was the required classes which gave them the base for their education.

For freshmen, Orientation and Physical Education were required. In Orientation, freshmen were taught not only about Southport, but also about careers and job placement. Reports were written on possible future careers, and movies were shown on applying for jobs.

Health and Safety and Physical Education were required for sophomores giving them a chance to learn more about themselves and put this knowledge to physical use.

History was a must for juniors. Since it was a two-semester course, students saw a lot of changes in the world.

"Students need to know the entire background of the U.S. in order to make wise decisions today and in the future," said Mrs. Marjorie Cox, history teacher.

Sociology or Economics were required classes for seniors.

"I feel Sociology is required because students need to learn about the behaviors of other people and how people interact with each other," said senior April Haase.

"Economics is considered a college-preparatory class. It is challenging and an introductory course to college. It can equip a student with the basics of business. For students who don't take it in college this at least gives them an idea of what is happening. They can pick up a paper and understand it," said Mr. Richard Dart.

Labs = learning in action

Action spoke louder than words for students who were involved in laboratory activities. The lab setting could be found not only in the science hall, but also in the foreign language rooms. Labs were simply a place for students to actually apply their knowledge.

In chemistry, labs varied in both difficulty and in procedures. Labs ranged from classification of a solid, a liquid or a gas to the synthesis of aspirin. Standard procedures were used in every lab, such as safety and clean-up policies. Many actual experiment procedures were often challenging and diverse.

Students were forced to measure to the nearest hundredth of a millimeter or even the nearest drop in titration projects.

Biology students concentrated on the science of nature. Their labs included the study of soil and even the dissection of worms and frogs.

Language labs involved the use of tapes and workbooks. Students listened to the tapes through headphones and followed or read along with their books. Occasionally, teachers would "listen in" and grade students.

"In labs I get a chance to see the results of my efforts," said junior Jeff Wooden.

Experience is sought

"Experience required" was a haunting phrase for many high school students when they searched for that needed job. But to get experience, one always needed a job—or did they?

For many students, Central Nine Vocational School was the alternative. Classes and activities made experience hard to come by. Central Nine gave students a "new" environment with the equal "old" education.

"I enjoy Data Processing at C-9. It's a more professional atmosphere," said senior Kim Moody.

Students daily boarded the C-9 bus and traveled to their "school away from school" for half the day. Medical occupations, secretarial work, mechanics and computers were just a few of the 16 courses which lured 170 juniors and seniors.

"I wanted to become a secretary after high school, but through C-9 I've found out I don't have to wait that long. Right now I work in the main office at C-9, and I also got an outside job as a secretary through an interview C-9 set up. It's like being in the real world. I really do jobs!" said senior Laurie Malloy.

Special touch needed

A variety of skills and knowledge were required for occupations. With jobs so scarce and college so expensive, students relied more and more on their high school education for training. Typing and notehand classes became even more popular courses for students.

In notehand, students learned a different technique of taking notes. Students were taught to write the sounds they heard rather than spelling out the words letter by letter. For students who planned on going to college or students who planned to take a job in the business field, notehand offered the chance to obtain and perfect a necessary skill according to their own specific needs.

"Well-developed skills such as proofreading and sentence structure will make a person of more value to a future employer," said Miss Terrie Mahin, business teacher.

Electricity and Woods gave students not only applicable skills, but also an awareness of various situations. Industrial arts classes gave students a chance to put their abilities and talents to work.

"Some of the concepts of electricity will help in future career choices and in adult life," said Mr. Ralph King, industrial arts teacher.

Mr. Roger Coleman, assistant to Mayor Hudnut, spoke during career day to students about various government jobs. He emphasized that the basic skills are needed constantly. He noted skills learned in high school would not only be used throughout school, but in any career at any level.

Classes meet needs

No two people are exactly alike, thus no two people's needs are exactly alike. Classes were structured to benefit all students, not just the "average." Special education classes were held to help those students who had some difficulty in certain areas and to give them a better opportunity to learn.

Stressing individuality in her classes was a main objective for Miss Kim Deitz, new special education teacher.

"I like my classes because I get to know a lot about the kids," said Miss Deitz.

Here students worked individually, at their own pace and competing with themselves. Classes taught basic skills students would need for life out of school.

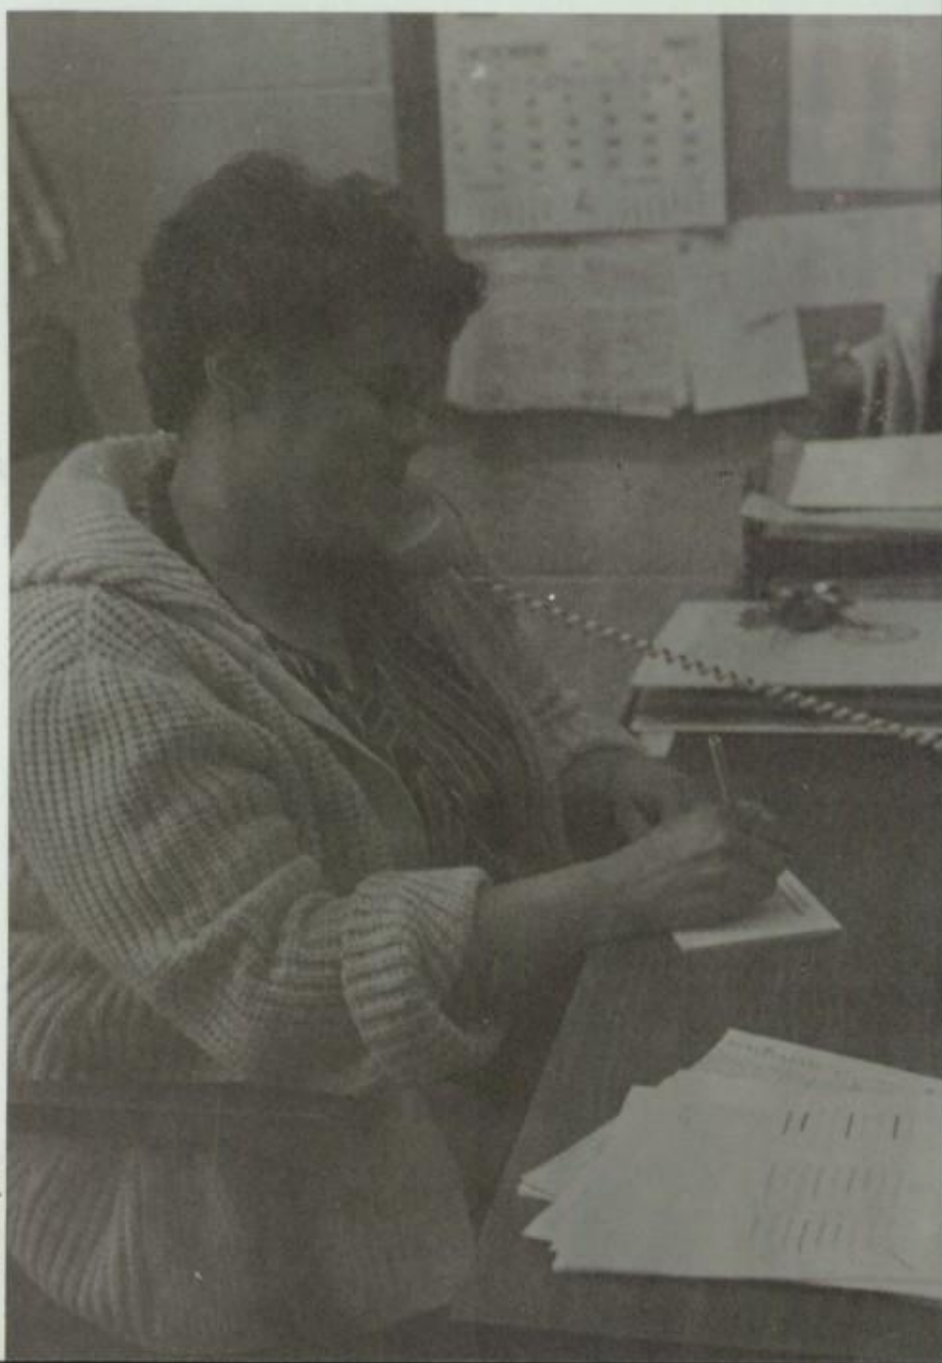

Mrs. Jennifer Wallace, Home School Advisor, also was available to help students with problems. Mrs. Wallace worked to help students with home problems and to give advice.

Mrs. Karen Melick, R.N., was on call daily as one of the school nurses. Mrs. Melick encountered many new experiences, including administering blood pressure tests at school to teachers as well as students.

Have it your own way!

With an enrollment of over 1600, Southport strived to make its students feel like individuals instead of numbers.

Old requirements and new regulations by the state constantly filled a student's schedule, but electives were a chance for students to be themselves.

"Electives are a chance to have it my own way and to be myself," said senior Steve Haag. He felt that he had benefited most from speech class, since learning to speak in front of people is a necessity.

"Electives help you learn more about a certain subject because everyone has different needs," said junior Mark Kindred, who enjoyed taking band.

on students' future plans.

"An elective, such as Psychology, isn't necessarily easy. It's simply a more personalized course," said senior Elizabeth Gritton.

Applied Economics was added for the first time this year, offering an old concept with new opportunities. According to Mr. Richard Dart, social studies chairman, students learned to establish a corporation, sell stock, make a product and market it. An outside business consultant from Indiana Bell provided students with information and advice. Students were also forced to run all aspects of the corporation including wages and sales.

"Students should be willing to go an extra mile because they choose an elective. Here, if a student doesn't do it, it just doesn't get done," said Mr. Dart.

Electives add variety

As careers branched off in several different directions, electives enabled students to select courses that would help them in their particular field of study. Electives ranged anywhere from Earth Science to Family Relations.

"Electives, such as Writing Term Papers, are a real challenge. It really makes me think and develop new skills," said junior Carla Harnishfeger.

A variety of opportunities were given to students in terms of electives.

"If a student wants an education, electives can enrich his studies, but electives also allow some students to sit in their classes and sleep," said senior Gayle Baumer.

In Foods and Nutrition, students were given the chance to test and improve their cooking skills, while English electives allowed students to get the basics such as grammar, sentence structure and spelling.

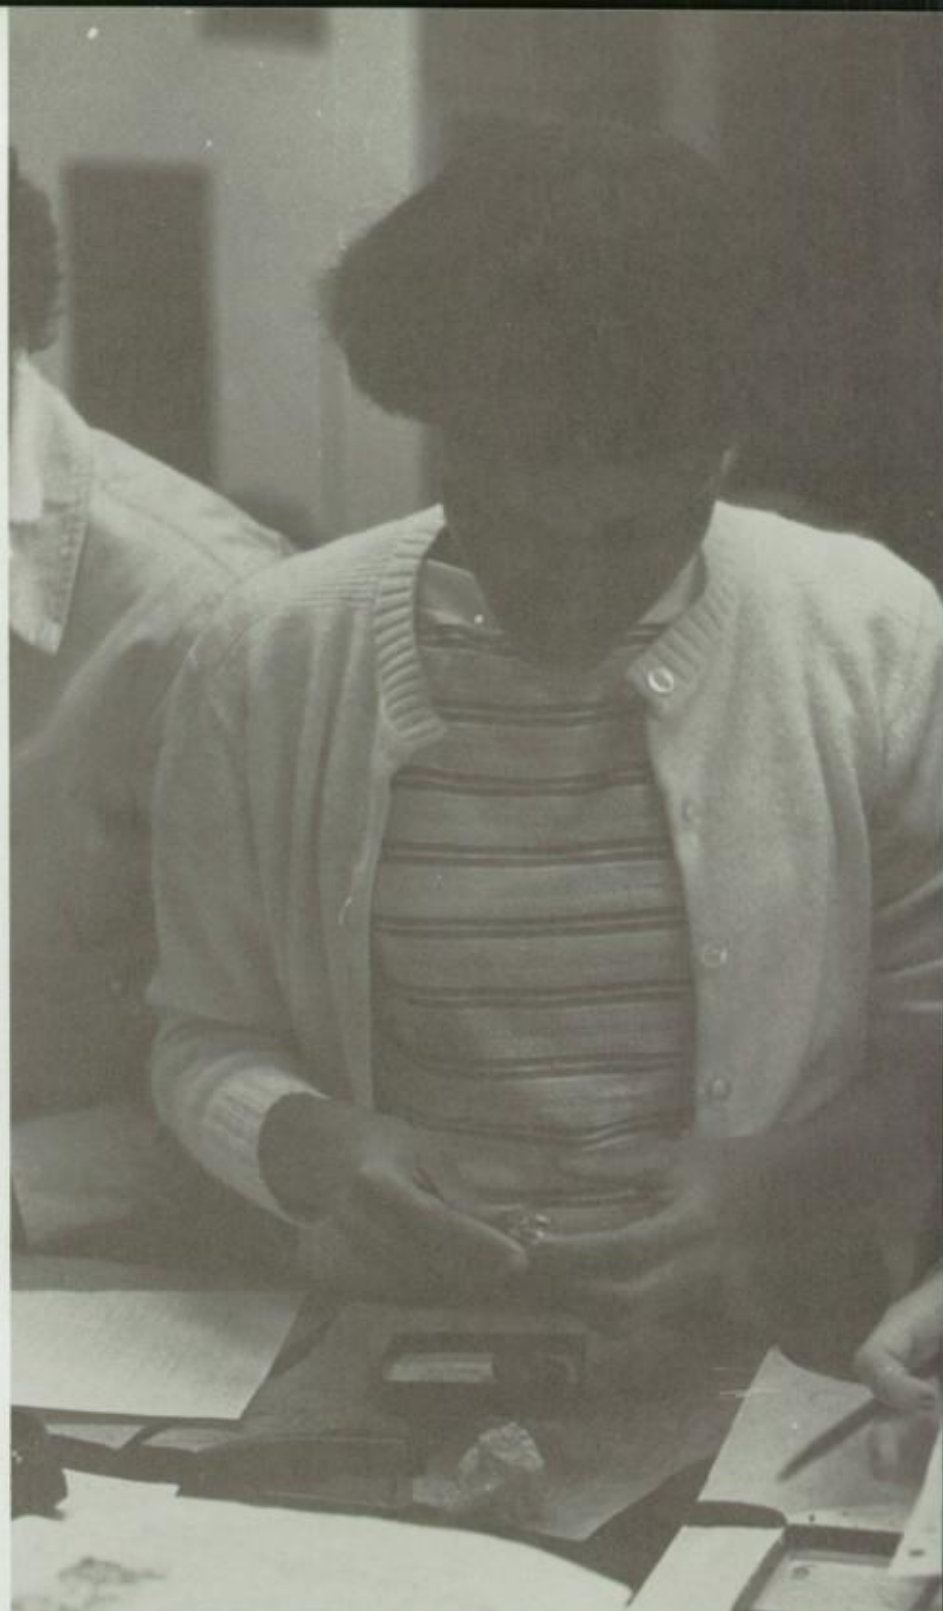

World History taught students the background for other countries besides the United States. They learned the reasons why certain people react the way they do and to respect other countries' values.

While electives still taught students basics, they varied enough to include many different areas.

More than just numbers

Protractors, rulers and the trusty calculator were tools found both in science and math rooms. From simple addition to computing cosecants, numbers were a constant factor in a student's day.

"You use numbers in just about everything you do, not just during algebra class," commented freshman Bill Wiese.

General math taught students the basic properties and concepts of mathematics, while Physics taught that three plus three doesn't always equal six in vector addition.

"Physics challenges you. It forces one into logical thought patterns about the world you live in. Physics disciplines the mind, but most of all it is fun!" said Mr. Victor Kerlin, physics teacher.

Math classes also varied in degrees of difficulty, depending on a student's future plans.

"A lot of math is used farther on down the line. In order to get to one stage you must start at the beginning and work ahead," said Mr. John Snepp, math department chairman.

"Computer math can be compared to a foreign language in that French is used to communicate with people, and the BASIC language is used to communicate with computers," said Mr. Robert Shaw, computer math teacher.

In accounting, students learned to prepare "T" Accounts, balance sheets and general journals.

"Accounting will help me later in life because it will teach me how to keep accurate records for my income tax forms," said senior Karen Hickman.

"Many courses have become more math and 'number' oriented, and without math a student has to place a good deal on faith," noted Mr. Snepp.

Perfection is goal

Imagination, creativity and dexterity were assets in several classes at Southport. Classroom curricula included more than just studying and taking notes. It involved students designing their own projects in art class and their own blueprints in drafting.

In drafting, students were supplied with a basic knowledge of the principles, tools and ideas of drafting.

Mrs. Karen Mellander, art teacher, commented that she expected all students to attain an understanding and appreciation of what good art is in society.

"I love to show off the work all of my students have done in all of my classes," said Mrs. Mellander.

Shorthand and typing gave students hands-on experience in the business field. From Personal Typing to Typing 3 and 4, classes were full of students trying to improve their ability for future use.

"Shorthand is a rewarding class because it is so different from all my other classes," said junior Debbie Rumbaugh.

Notehand, along with shorthand, gave a college-bound student some practice and experience in taking notes and the tools for taking them quickly.

"Teachers talk fast at times. I can't write down everything verbatim, and notehand gives me the opportunity to still write it all down," said senior Kris Kinnick.

A poster in Mrs. Mellander's room may have summed it up best: "Creative minds are rarely tidy, but always busy."

Noteworthy dedication a must in music

"Any band can play notes, but few can play music" was a motto posted in room 500.

More than a motto, it was a goal for band members.

Style, blending and interpretation were stressed in order to turn "dead" notes into living melodies.

"Band is a big change from last year. We have to work a lot more. It's more than just playing. It's real dedication," said junior Todd Gibbs.

The new director, Mr. Max Jones and new assistant Mr. Eric Chandler, added new styles and procedures to the old band structure. Weekly testing was introduced in order to better evaluate students and also to encourage practicing.

Mr. Jones commented that testing is a way of measuring goals. Grades can be given more fairly since students are all on different levels.

"Individual effort is our way of raising the standards of band," he said.

Jazz band experienced a big change during the course of the year. Due to conflicts, the class wasn't offered on the school schedule and had to be put into weekly evening practices. Try-outs were established, and some new instruments were added. The new band teamed with Perry's Jazz band to perform at Valle Vista Country Club for the North Central Evaluation reception and played at the Perry Jazz Festival Jan. 21.

New teacher Miss Ellen Robison conducted the orchestra.

"The orchestra plans on visiting middle and elementary schools to recruit younger students for orchestra. We're having a lot of professional artists come in and try to expose students to the professional community. We're trying to form a bond between Southport and the professionals," said Miss Robison.

Choir voices opinion

"Choir isn't an individualized class. We all have to work together. If one person doesn't know his part, the whole choir may suffer," commented Miss Pam Hoopingarner, choral director.

Over 150 students were involved in various choir activities, including Swing Choir, Cardinelles, A Cappella and Freshmen Chorus.

"I enjoy Swing Choir because I get to travel around and perform in front of people, and I can sing a wide variety of music," said senior Eric Smithers.

A national choir festival in Chicago was a goal for Swing Choir. The trip involved both performing and some sightseeing.

"We've been working hard towards Chicago because it is a challenge. Most of us haven't competed before," said junior Kathy Sherman.

Eventually, the choral department hopes to work with the band and orchestra and develop their own "mini-musical." Plans also were underway to bring Madrigals back to Southport.

The choirs performed this year more than any previous year. Swing Choir sang for women's business groups, nursing homes and various clubs throughout the Indianapolis area.

"We're trying to equate good in Southport," said Miss Hoopingarner.

World events affect classroom studies

The world we live in changes daily and whether events were as far away as Lebanon or as near as Greenwood, students were forced to deal more and more with situations and consequences.

The government classes taught students why, how and where democracy works. Socialistic and parliamentary forms of government also were taught to give students an idea of what is going on around the world. Current events were a daily topic in several social studies courses. They strived to help students understand what is happening in the world and why.

"The world today is much smaller than 50 years ago, and the student must be aware of what's going on in all parts of the world. The United States must be ready to recognize and defend their allies," said Mr. Homer Hawkins, social studies teacher.

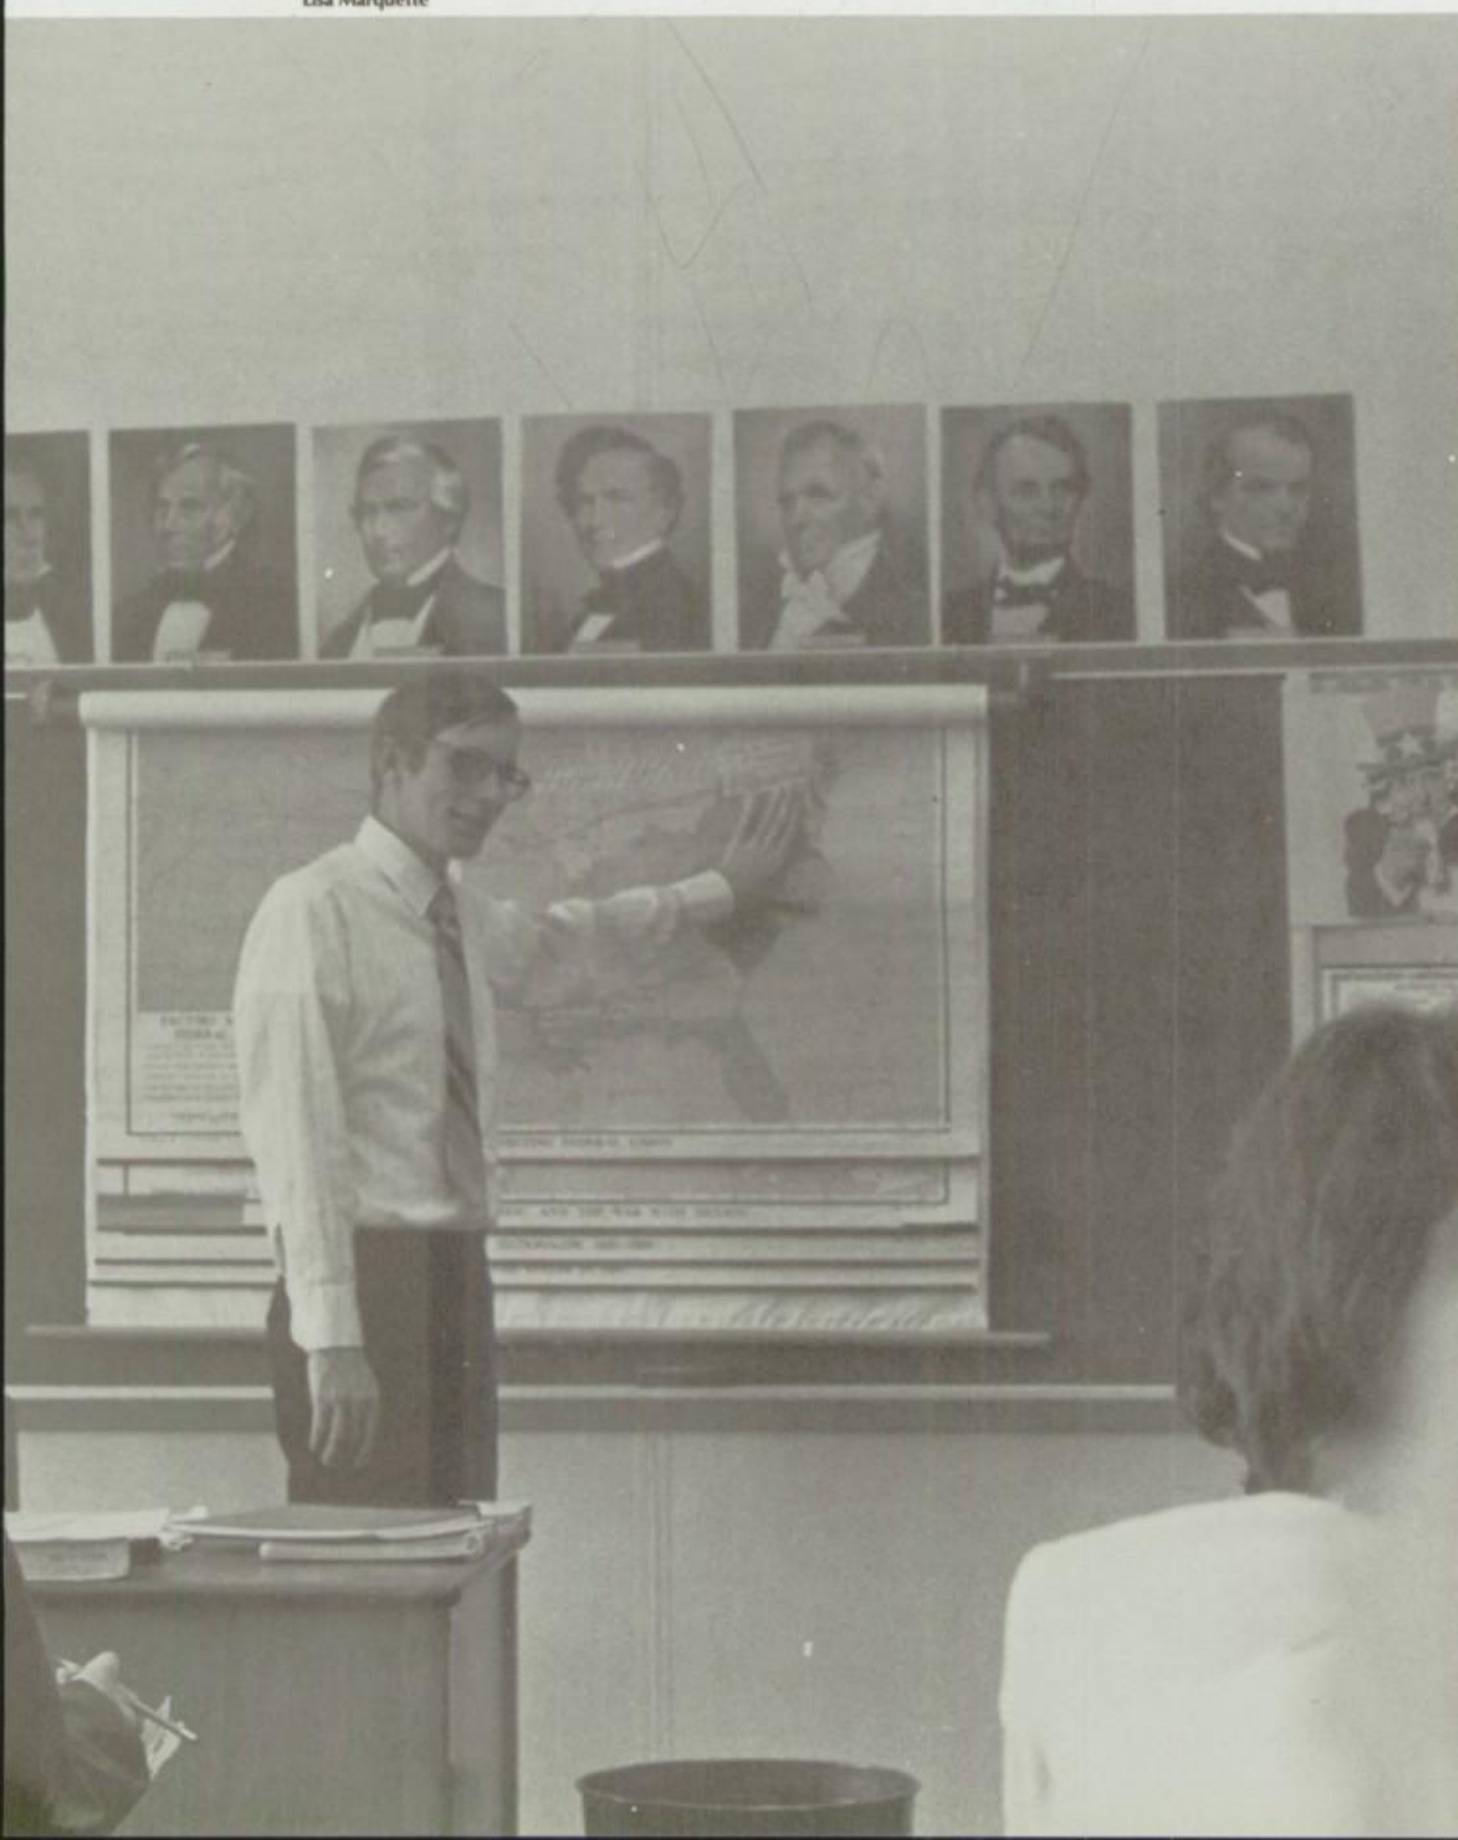

A course in western world literature was taught by Mrs. Janet Stumpf. According to Mrs. Stumpf, this literature includes places and writers not usually covered in any courses except college level.

"We Americans remain too often ignorant of the languages, history, customs and beliefs of our new world neighbors. This class offers at least a taste of all of these things. I think the benefits of knowing a bit about other parts of the world are numerous," said Mrs. Stumpf.

Girls take first county

Girls' softball was added to the athletic program last year for the first time ever.

Because of the new sport many girls found themselves trying to decide between track, tennis or softball.

The team ended their season with a record of 14-2 and received first place in the county tournament. "We lost to Roncalli and Chatard on account of mental errors," said Rita York, second baseman.

Since it was the first year for softball, there was no state tournament. Had there been a state tourney, the girls had the potential to win it, according to Coach Steve Montgomery.

"It was really hard to accept the fact that we couldn't play on any further," said Amy Burge, short stop. "We knew we could have placed high in the state," she added.

"All the girls played a very important role throughout the season," said Coach Montgomery.

According to Eren Taylor, outfielder, those who didn't participate felt like they were in the games by cheering at the sidelines and keeping the team in touch with what was going on.

"We never really got down," said Amy. "We would just pick up the pieces and start over again."

Hurlers gain experience

Gaining experience seemed to be the name of the game for the 1982-83 varsity baseball team.

Although the Cards did not excel recordwise, they did in many other ways. Kirk Freeman and Tony Wampler both batted over .400, and Dan Burkman single-handedly pitched half the team's total victories.

Jim Bushur and Robbie Updike were also moved up from reserve to varsity near the end of the season. "I wanted my younger players to gain experience," said Coach Dwenger.

Injuries added a problem to the team. At one point in the season, three pitchers were out, injuring the Cardinal lineup.

The team also lacked the proper depth to compete successfully against the caliber of teams they faced, according to Coach Dwenger. The Card's hardest game was against number-one ranked North Central, which they lost, 6-2, added Coach Dwenger.

The team also had the problem of poor weather. "The rain cut down on the amount of effective practice we had," said Coach Dwenger.

The team moved to the second round of the sectionals where they were defeated by Perry Meridian by a score of 3-1. The Cards also met the Falcons in regular season, this time coming out on top.

Overall, the Cards pulled together to end their season 10-18.

Dan Burkman, Steve Esarey, Artie Buescher, Roger Mercer, Tim Springer and Tony Wampler were the only returning lettermen out of the 14 players on the squad.

When speaking in reference to the '84 season, Coach Dwenger, now going into his 14th year as head coach, summarized his outlook when he said, "We'll just go back to the fundamentals and look for a better season."

Hard work pays off

Hours of running miles and lifting weights were a few activities tracksters became accustomed to before and during the season in order to prepare themselves for their meets ahead.

The team started their season with a 93½-24½ win over Franklin Community. They went on to win 8 more of their 12 meets and placed fourth in sectionals and in regionals.

High points of the season included defeating Tech, 65-61, and Manual 65-62. "We hadn't beaten either of those teams in many, many years," said Head Coach Scott Fangman.

Another high point was scoring a point on the all-sports trophy with a win over Perry Meridian, 75-55.

School records were broken in the 100 and 200 meter dashes, 300-meter low hurdles and 400-meter relay.

Senior Rodney Skipwith broke his own record of 10.7 seconds with a time of 10.64 seconds. He also set the 200-meter dash record at 22 seconds flat. The hurdles' record was set by junior Bobby Kennedy with a time of 38.6 seconds. "I accomplished most of my goals during the season," said Kennedy.

The 400-meter relay team, consisting of Scott Crawford, Mark Hall, Rodney Skipwith and Robert Willis also set a record at 43.5 seconds.

Excellent performances were turned in by 1983 graduate Steve Ritter and seniors Eric Bischoff, Jerry Butler, Steve Haag and Mike Schaler in discus and shot put.

All the miles, quarters and halves paid off for the girls' track team. The team had six girls go on to compete in the state meet.

The 400-meter relay team of Tracy Miller, sophomore, Laura Simpson, 1983 graduate; Beth Springer, senior; and Carolyn Willis, junior, competed in the state meet, but did not make it to the finals.

Karrie Marschke, sophomore, made it to the state meet in the 1,600-meter race, but did not place. Karrie also holds the school record in the 1,600-meters which she broke when she became the county champion.

"The highpoint of the season had to be ('83 grad) Ami Jackson repeating her state championship in the discus," said Coach Tom Hathaway. Ami also went on to win the national prep meet.

Before competing in the state meet, the team completed a 9-2 season. They also placed second in sectionals and regionals and finished seventh in the state meet.

The team has a unique togetherness, according to Beth Springer. "I thought it was great how everyone pulled for one another. There wasn't any backstabbing," she added.

Girls improve record

Fighting their way through a tough schedule, the 1982-83 girls' tennis team improved over last season's record to finish at 6-11.

"I felt there was an improvement from the beginning until the end," said Coach Steve Cline. "The record shows that. Park Tudor, who shut us out at the beginning of the season, gave up a point against us in the sectionals," noted Cline.

Number one singles player Cathy Daus and number two Linda Dye, both juniors, comprised the strength of the singles team. Playing doubles were seniors Tina Shotts and Lisa Nickander.

Practices for the team consisted of sprints, cross court shots and other drills, according to Linda.

"Practices were long and trying at times, but Coach stuck with us and made us improve. He's a tremendous coach," said Cathy.

Netmen lose battle

Falling prey to a schedule containing several state-ranked teams, the boys' tennis team ended with a 3-12 record.

The reason for this, according to Coach Steve Cline, was the lack of a solid singles section. "We just couldn't find anyone who was competitive at any singles position," said Coach Cline.

More than compensating for the weak singles section were the boys' doubles teams, especially at the number one position.

"We had a very strong doubles section," said Coach Cline.

The team, composed of senior Kurt Wheeler and junior Scott Koch, compiled a 17-5 record throughout the season. The reason for the difference in the amount of games played, according to Kurt, was because they advanced to the finals of the Lafayette-Jefferson Invitational Tournament.

Sometimes, however, a record doesn't reflect the quality at which an athlete really performed.

"We had several matches against state-ranked teams that were lost by one or two points. Being so close to victory and still coming up short can really affect a player mentally," said Coach Cline.

"The best way to win is to go in there, and while warming up with your opponent, try to find out his weaknesses. Make him shoot your shots," advised Coach Cline. "If you can play the first three to five minutes error-free, then victory is almost guaranteed," added Cline.

"Error-free tennis is exactly what Coach tried to get us to play," said Kurt Wheeler. "He's a very disciplined coach," added Kurt.

"I allow every player to try any position they like. Then, if they can't handle it, I reassign them to a position for which they're better suited. You can't have a good team unless your players are happy where they play. And that," concluded Coach Cline, "is the most important thing."

The golf team had a record of 1-11, but, according to Norley, they went against some tough teams, such as North Central and Carmel.

Bad weather presented somewhat of a problem. One meet was only half finished because of the rainy weather that plagued the golfers.

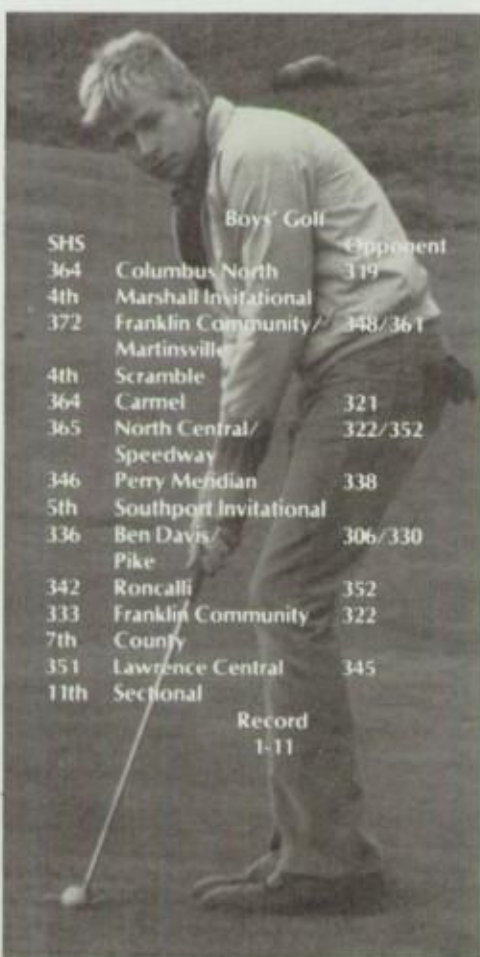

One of the high points of the season included dropping southside rival Roncalli by 10 strokes. The Cards shot one of their best scores, a 333, against Franklin Community.

The golfers placed seventh in the county and eleventh in the sectionals. "We didn't do as well as we would have liked to in sectionals," said Norley.

Alan Miller, a 1983 graduate, had the best average on the team followed by another '83 graduate Spencer Fox, who had an average of 88.2. The team, as a whole, had an average of 87.5.

"There was a 50 degree temperature difference between our meets in August and October," noted Coach McArdle.

The golfers ended their season with an 8-5-1 record, the tie being a rain-out with Park-Tudor.

The team started their season with a triangular meet with Brebeuf and Pike. The lady golfers beat Pike 215-231, but fell to Brebeuf who had a score of 192.

The team improved a great deal between the county and sectionals, according to Coach McArdle. The golfers placed seventh with a score of 411 from a field of 11 in sectionals, and placed fifty with a score of 434 from a field of 15 in county action.

Outstanding individuals included junior Anne Murray who tied the school record for low putts. The record was 12.

Captain Chris Kellerhouse, senior, was medalist three times, and junior Laura Partridge was medalist twice during the season.

Returning hopefuls for next year include juniors Kelly Chandler, Anne Murray and Laura Partridge, who was the number one player, according to Coach McArdle. Another hopeful is freshman Susan Speedy.

The girls' cross country team had a good season this year, but it was never permitted to develop to its potential, according to Coach Tom Hathaway.

When one person was out with an injury or illness it really hurt the girls, he added.

In spite of all the injuries the girls still finished the season undefeated in dual meets.

"The girls showed a lot of guts by hanging in when things went wrong, and towards the end they really showed the desire I knew it would take," said Coach Hathaway.

"It was hard to keep going when you know you might not have enough people to really be competitive," said Carla Harnishfeger, junior.

"I think it helped a lot when we would do things together besides running," said freshman Michelle Damrell.

"Everyone was easy going and didn't cause any trouble," said Carla. "Maybe it was because there weren't any sisters on the team this year."

"We always said we wished the season would end, but when the end came we wanted to continue," said Carla.

Boys start out slowly

A slow start did not keep the boys' cross country team from working toward their goal of competing in the state meet.

The boys may not have made it to the state, but they ended their season with a 6-3 record, sectional championship, and a regional runner-up.

"Ben Davis was our first big success," said junior Jim Stacy. "Everyone ran their personal best," he added.

The leadership qualities of this team helped a great deal through the entire season, according to Coach Tom Hathaway.

Along with a new season comes a lot of differences. The main difference which Paul Eakle noticed was the better attitudes.

"I don't think we tried to keep one another up as much as we should have," said Stacy.

"Attitudes will change next year because of the younger team," Stacy concluded.

Desire motivates Cards

Desire. A strong word, but what does it mean? To some, it's a quest for fame and power. But to the varsity football team, it meant something entirely different.

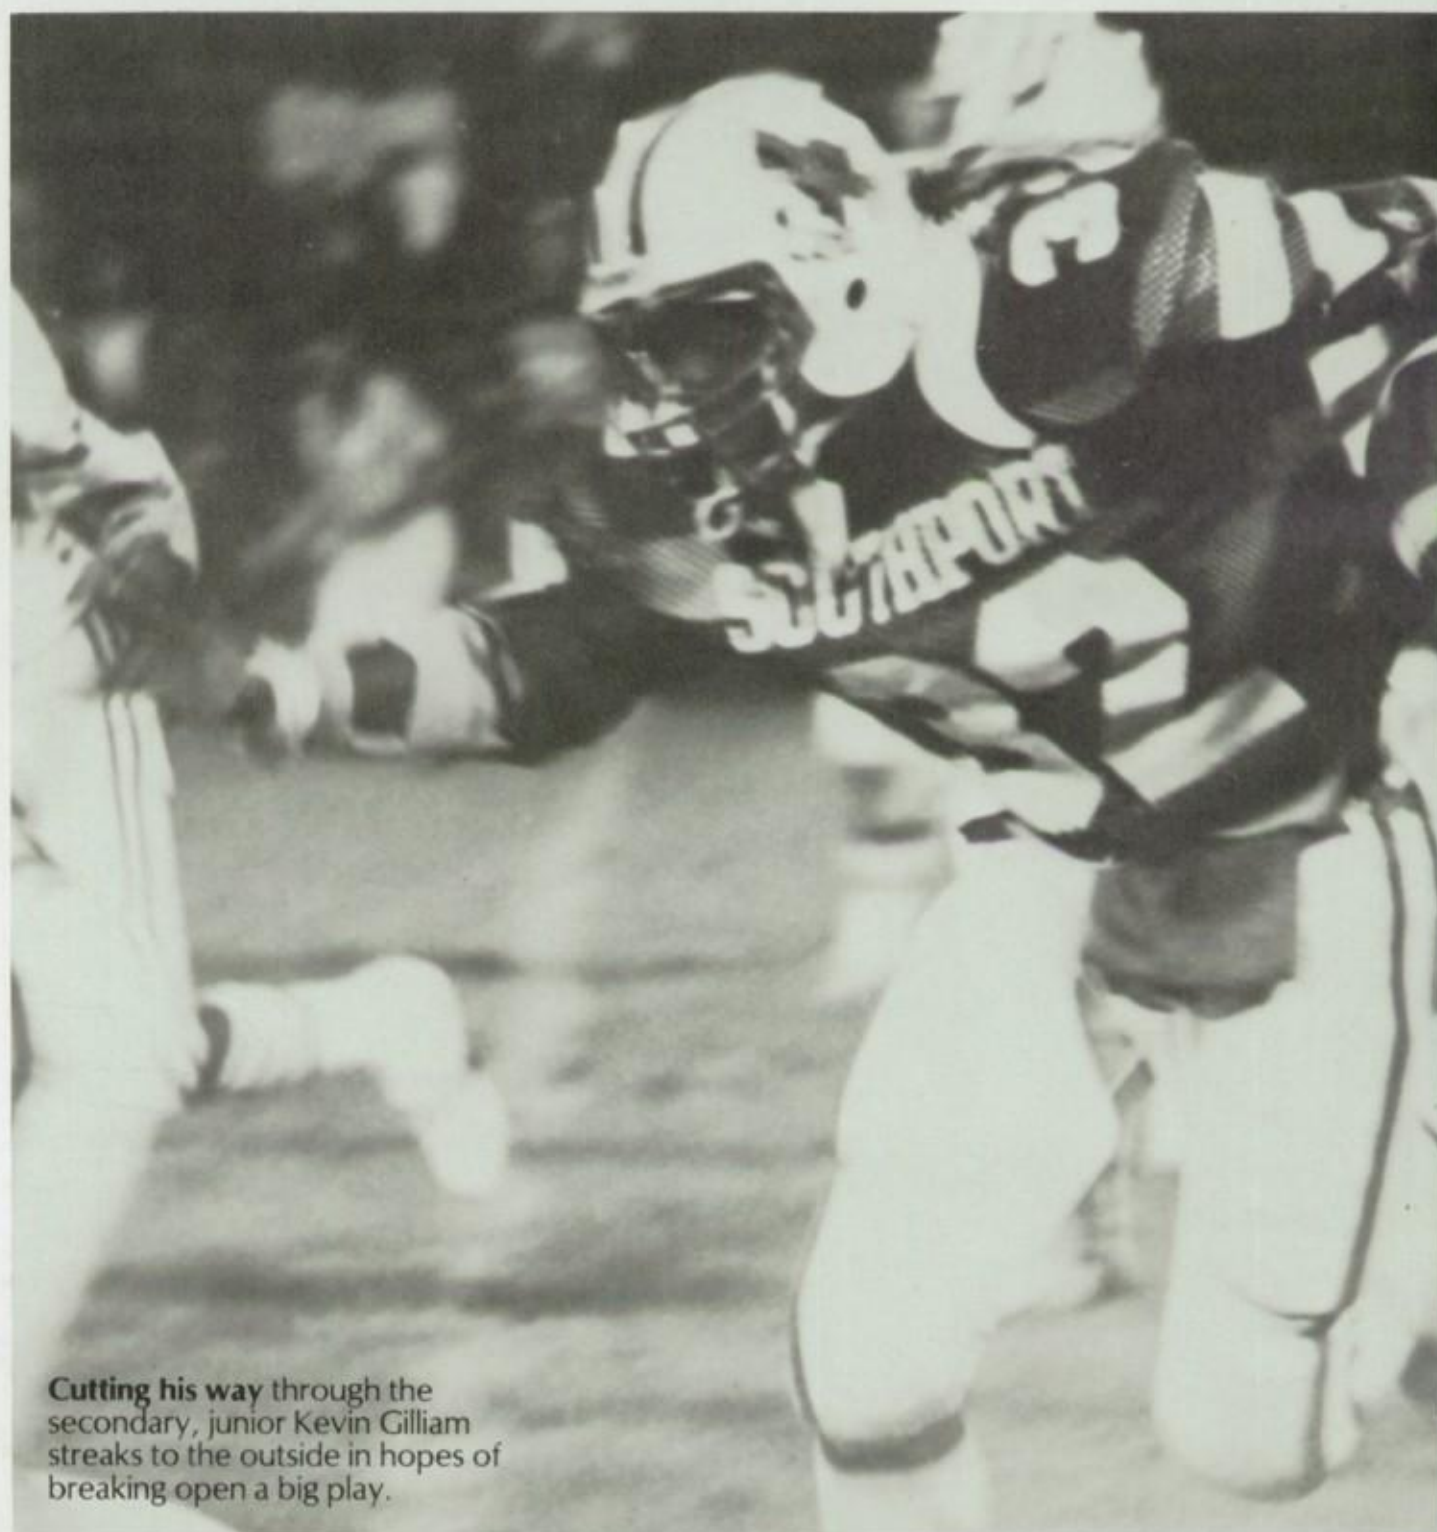

Their desire was to improve, both individually and as a unit. "We were a determined squad. We knew this season was going to be a tough one, but we didn't give up. We stuck with it and played our best until the last minutes of the last game," said Head Coach Gary Demes.

Indeed, their season was to be a tough one. Their schedule, according to a computer analysis done by Indiana Sports magazine was the toughest in the state of Indiana. "We never gave up our philosophy of playing as a team," said junior quarterback Kirk Freeman.

Coach Demes, trying to promote personal pride, designed shirts for this year's squad. The shirts, emblazoned with such sayings as "Thou shall not pass," or "Tomey's trench warriors," were designed to give each player a sense of pride about his position with a slogan on the front or back. "I thought the shirts were a good idea. I felt more confident as a part of the team," said junior Frank Hittel.

—Noel Chessman

Calling the play from the line of scrimmage, junior quarterback Kirk Freeman checks over the defense, looking for something that may have eluded the coach's eye. Kirk is the first Southport quarterback to pass for over 1,000 yards in one season. After two years, he currently has over 2,500 yards.

Cutting his way through the secondary, junior Kevin Gilliam streaks to the outside in hopes of breaking open a big play.

Down, set! Blue sixteen, blue sixteen, hut, hike! Quarterback Kirk Freeman leads the Cardinal offense against rival Perry Meridian. Perry defeated Southport, 28-6.

Awaiting the snap, the Cardinal lineman prepare to blitz against Roncalli with the help of senior safety John Voris.

Cardinals seek depth

"Depth is an elusive thing. It's very hard to come by. There's no set pattern or ritual to gaining it, it just comes naturally. I guarantee that you won't see Cardinal football at its finest until everyone does their part, whether it's cheering, boosting, or playing," explained Head Reserve Football Coach Steve Ingmire.

The reason for the rising spirit among the players was due to their snapping a three-season losing streak by defeating rival Perry Meridian. "This gave us a tremendous psychological advantage," said Coach Ingmire. The team, boasting this victory, stood 1-8 for the season, with the defense being the team's strong point.

The Cards worked on ways to handle the problem of inexperience, explained Coach Ingmire. One way was by letting the reserve scrimmage the varsity before an upcoming varsity game, thus aiding both teams.

All these factors tie together to one basic point-fundamentals. "There's not much we can do until we establish the fundamentals," explained Coach Ingmire. "We'll just continue working on them, improving a little at a time. Nothing good ever comes easy," concluded Coach Ingmire.

Fighting injury as well as apathy throughout the first half of the season, the freshman football team rallied, winning their final four games of the season to finish with a winning record of 5-4.

"It seemed as if everything broke against us in the first half," said Freshman Head Coach Steve Montgomery. "There was no enthusiasm. There were quite a few minor injuries, and we went 1-4. After that, the boys loosened up, and as a result we didn't lose any more games," added Coach Montgomery.

"Overall, the season was enjoyable. We started really slow, but gradually progressed toward the end of the season. We got fired up and just wanted to play ball," concluded Coach Montgomery.

Team goes 12-2

This year's girls' swimming team put out the best season in 20 years, according to Coach Mary Lou Walters.

"We rewrote the record board is what we did," added Coach Walters. Gina Mulinaro broke the diving record for six dives with a score of 227 and the record for eleven dives with a score of 321.

The 200-meter medley relay broke the school record three times ending up with a record of one second better than the old record. Members of the relay team were Cindi Wooden and Jenny Coss, freshmen; DeAnn Gaither, junior; and Pam Bryant, senior.

The 400-meter free style relay broke the record with a time of about a second better. Members of this team were Pam, Cindi, Jenny and freshman Jenny Matson.

Cindi broke another record in the 50-meter free style. This one was on her own, said Coach Walters.

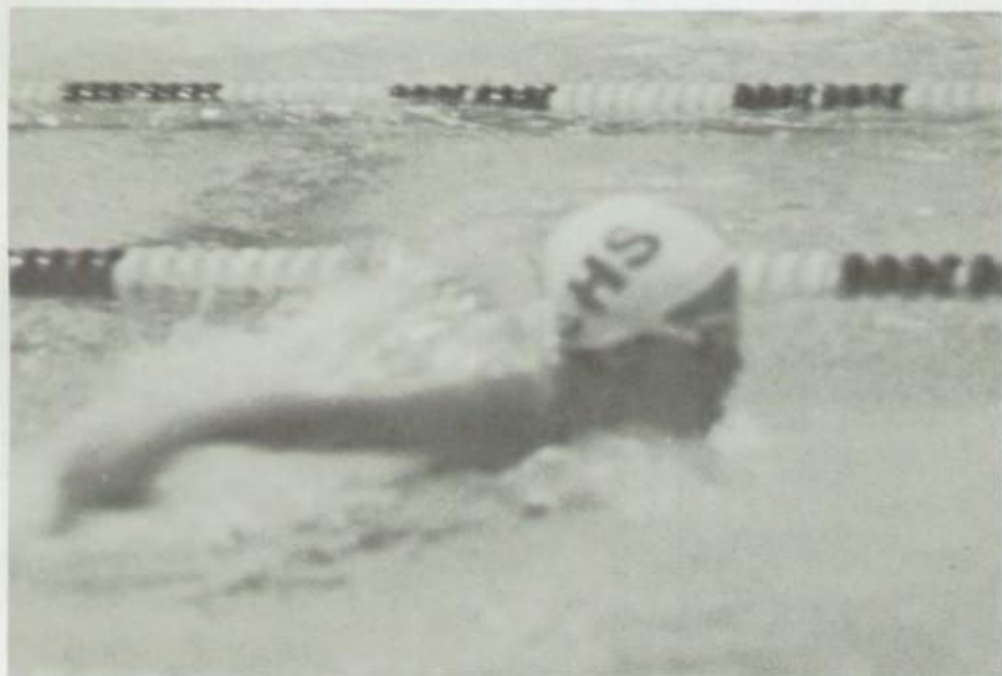

According to Coach Walters, the team's only motivation was their own competitiveness. "They saw the competition, water, and went for it," she said.

The reason for the winning season, according to Jenny Coss, was the team wanted a winning season. "Our determination was a big asset," she noted.

"I wasn't sure what the team would be like," said Jenny. The freshmen were accepted as well as anyone else, said Coach Walters.

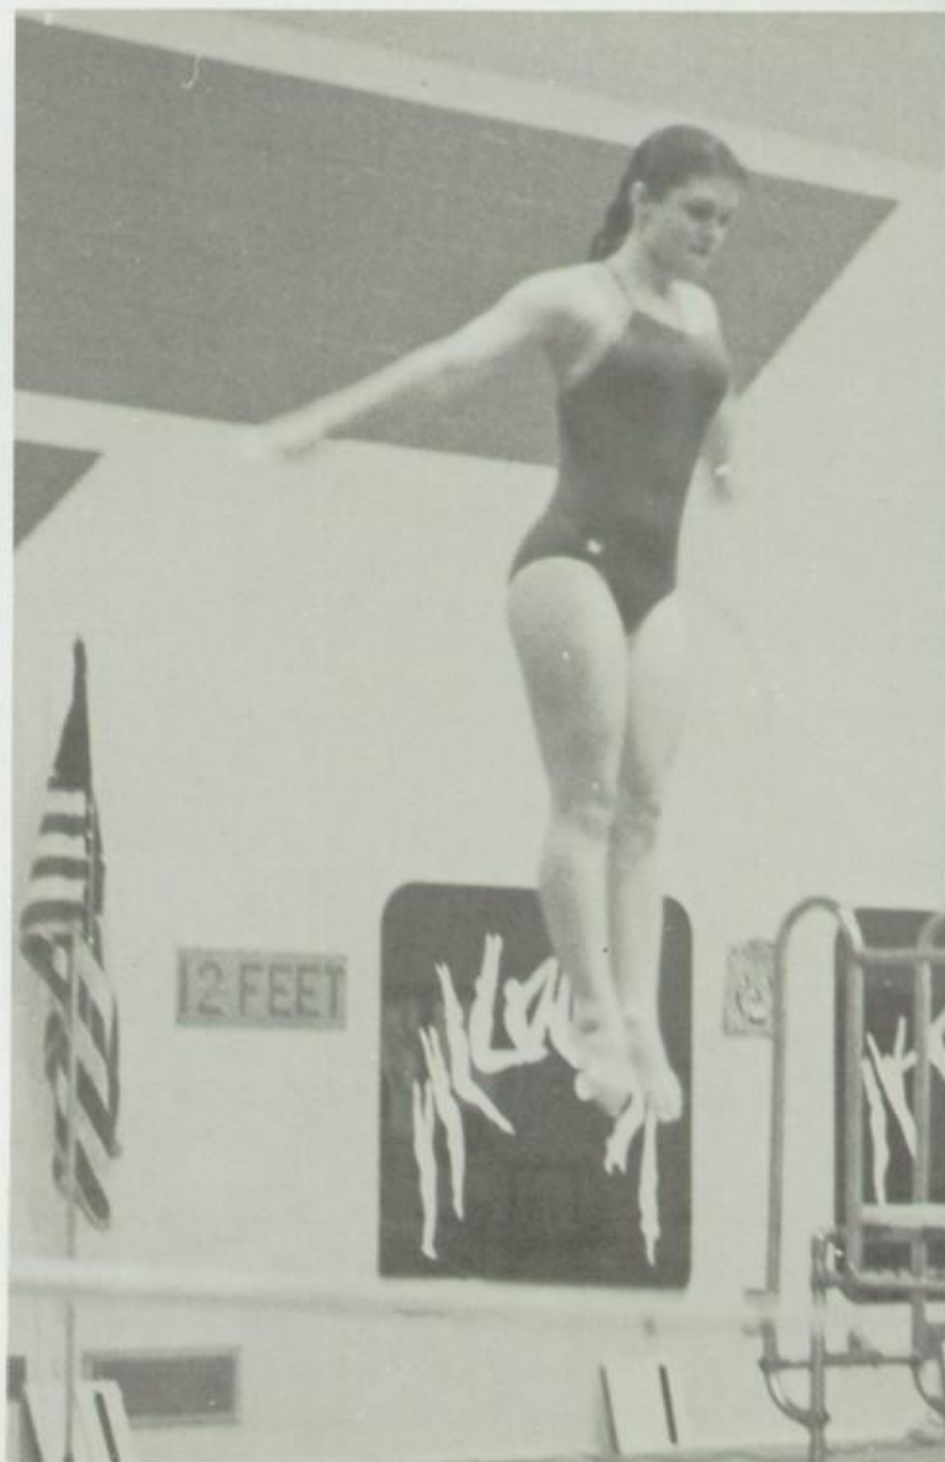

In closing, Jenny added, "We will really miss seniors Pam Bryant, Marian Miller and Suzannah Schaefer."

Swimmers practice intensely

To many people, swimming is nothing more than a recreational pastime, a carefree activity requiring little more than a desire to cool off in the summer.

However, the boys' varsity swim team couldn't be more serious.

"We're a very intense team. When we swim, we swim hard and fast. There's no room for lack of commitment on our team," said Phil Chamberlin, junior.

The team, 2-14 for the season, averages 5,000 to 6,000 yards per swimmer every practice. "A good comparison would be a runner jogging seven to eight miles every day," noted Phil.

Practices included concentrating on the basics in order to prepare for the sectionals. "We tried to swim tired during the season, so we'd be tougher for the sectionals," said Phil. This method has proven successful over the past few seasons, according to Coach Rager. Swimmers have cut as much as 10 seconds off their sectional times in recent years.

While the boys were excelling physically, lack of participation and spirit took its toll on them, according to Coach Rager. This year's turnout was so small there was no reserve team. This, however, can be attributed mostly to the construction that forced them to practice at the Indiana Central University facility all season.

Mr. Rager, however, feels the new summer swimming program sponsored by Perry Township will also aid in remedying this problem.

"We should see a big improvement in the quality of swimmers we see coming out of here," said Coach Rager.

Just as important as the physical aspect of sports is the mental attitude towards the team. "School spirit is a necessity to a successful team. It takes a special kind of person to be an athlete. You must be willing to work for something, such as showing school pride," said Coach Rager.

But, as Coach Rager pointed out, "Things are never as bad as they seem. We have an excellent group of freshmen coming in, and next year we'll have the best pool in the state. And that," concluded Coach Rager, "is something to be proud of."

This year's girls' basketball team played a different type of ball, according to Coach Marilyn Ramsey. "The type of ball they played was full of fast breaks, lay ups and excitement," she said.

"The team's quickness seemed to amaze a lot of people, even the newspapers, coaches and other teams," said Coach Ramsey.

The team did not try to compete for the high scorer of the game this year, they were just given a percentage Coach Ramsey wanted them to hit and they aimed for it.

Against Pike the girls were asked to shoot 50 percent from the field and they shot 61 percent. They also tied the record for defensive allowance by holding Pike to only 28 points. That record was set in 1979.

The Pike game almost gave the girls another record. This record, which was also set in 1979, was the offensive score, of 91 points, and they scored 90 points.

Another high point was the Center Grove game, according to Coach Ramsey. At this game the team was to shoot 70 percent from the free throw line and they shot 71 percent.

"I thought we did pretty well this season," said Rachel Metheny. "We did not lose a home game."

Quickness aids team

Attitude changes

Playing hard and playing together were the two main goals accomplished by the boys' basketball team this year, according to Coach Bill Springer.

"Everyone has done what has been asked of him this year," said Coach Springer. "We didn't win every game, but it wasn't because of lack of effort," he added.

"The team had a very positive attitude this year," commented senior guard Kevin Head. He said this was a contributing factor to the improved team record.

Senior center Jerry Butler noticed a better attitude toward the team from the student body. "The fans seemed to care more about us this year," he said.

The Ben Davis game was one of the most impressive performances of the season by the team according to Coach Springer. The Cards finally fell to the state-ranked Giants, 51-54 in an overtime. "After the Ben Davis game, the team realized they could play with anyone in the state," said Coach Springer.

"We lost a few close games, but I think the team was pretty pleased with the way things went this season," said Butler.

"Jim Bushur has probably been our most consistent player this season," said Coach Springer. Bushur, who played guard, was among the leading scorers in the county throughout the season.

Senior Dale Burris contributed a great deal of needed leadership to the team during the season, according to Coach Springer. "Kurt Wheeler also added a lot this year. He is a hard worker," he added.

Coach Springer, completing his second year, says he enjoyed working with all the boys on the team. "They all did what was needed from them. They were a great group of kids to work with."

Grapplers place in sectionals

"Wrestling is 70 percent mental and 30 percent physical. The reason we had a 9-6 season was because we mentally prepared ourselves," said varsity wrestler Bill Richardson, senior.

"The boys' attitude improved steadily throughout the season," said Coach David Holman.

Partly responsible for the attitude improvement was the addition of new assistant Coach Steve Dildine who was the new dean of boys. "He's a tremendous assistant. He's had quite a bit of experience, both as a wrestler and as a coach," said Coach Holman.

Overall, the boys delivered an outstanding performance during the season according to team captain Cameron Dobson. Wrestlers such as Doug Jackson, Bill Gilbreath, Bob Bay and Roger Simpson recorded only one loss throughout the entire season.

Individual performance are important to a wrestling team, according to Dobson. "Wrestling is an individual sport. You decide what weight you want to wrestle and you don't need to depend on anyone but yourself. You can be as good as you want to be," he concluded.

Senior Suzie Carrico beats the bottom bar in the uneven bars event at a gymnastics meet.

With arms raised and toes pointed, sophomore Tami Taylor prepares for another move on the balance beam.

Girls compete well

"This season has been the most successful with the sweetest, most enthusiastic and most competitive girls I've ever had," said Head Coach Michele Grandstaff of the girls' gymnastics team.

The only problems for the team were injuries which plagued the team on and off throughout the season.

Another problem was with the bars. The team had only one set of bars to practice on, which made it difficult for more than a couple of girls to practice, according to Coach Grandstaff.

"Once we get another set of bars, more girls will be able to practice," said Coach Grandstaff.

According to Coach Grandstaff, the meets the lady gymnasts lost were very close, especially at the beginning of the season.

Event leaders included senior Suzie Carrico on bars, sophomore Alicia Elliott on floor exercise, Alicia and Gina Mulinaro, sophomores, on vault and sophomore Tami Taylor on the beam.

"We're by far strongest on bars. Suzie was my best girl on them," said Coach Grandstaff.

Coach Grandstaff expects a strong team next year since there were only two seniors, Suzie Carrico and Tamara Laird, on the team.

Reserve, frosh gain experience

Freshmen and reserve basketball is designed to train and give experience to its players.

"The team put forth a good effort and had an excellent attitude," said Coach Mark Fletcher of the boys' reserve team.

Fundamentals were an important part of the team, according to Coach Fletcher.

Twelve and four was the record for the girls' reserve team with their losses being within 10 points of the opposing team, according to Coach Pat O'Connor.

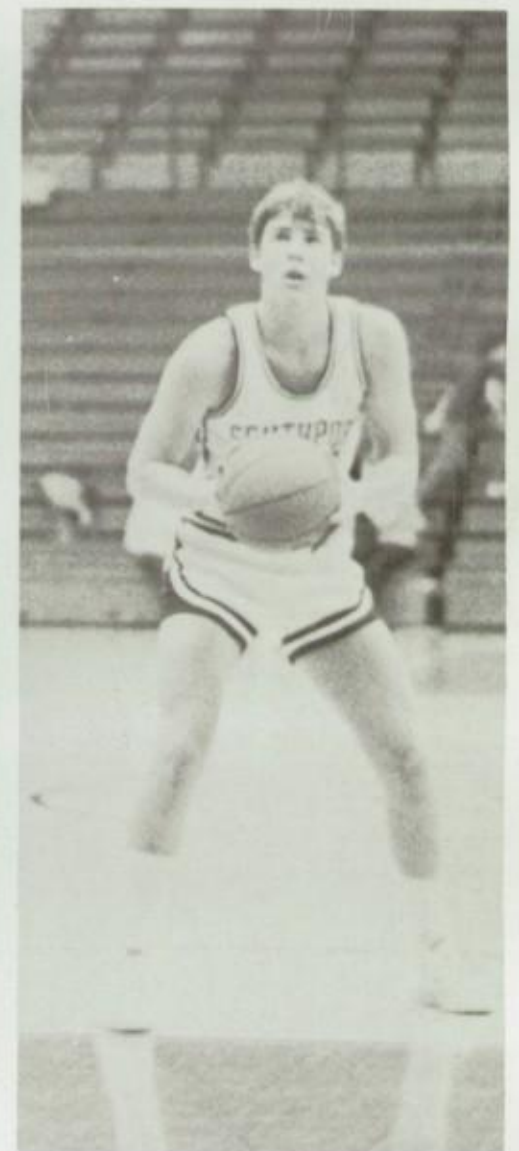

The boys' frosh team ended their season 5-10 with close games against Greenwood, Creston and Manual, according to Coach Dennis Bruce.

The girls' freshmen team ended their season with a 2-4 record.

"We only played half a season because it wasn't decided in time to have a full season," said Coach Dennis Dodd.

Boys play for fun

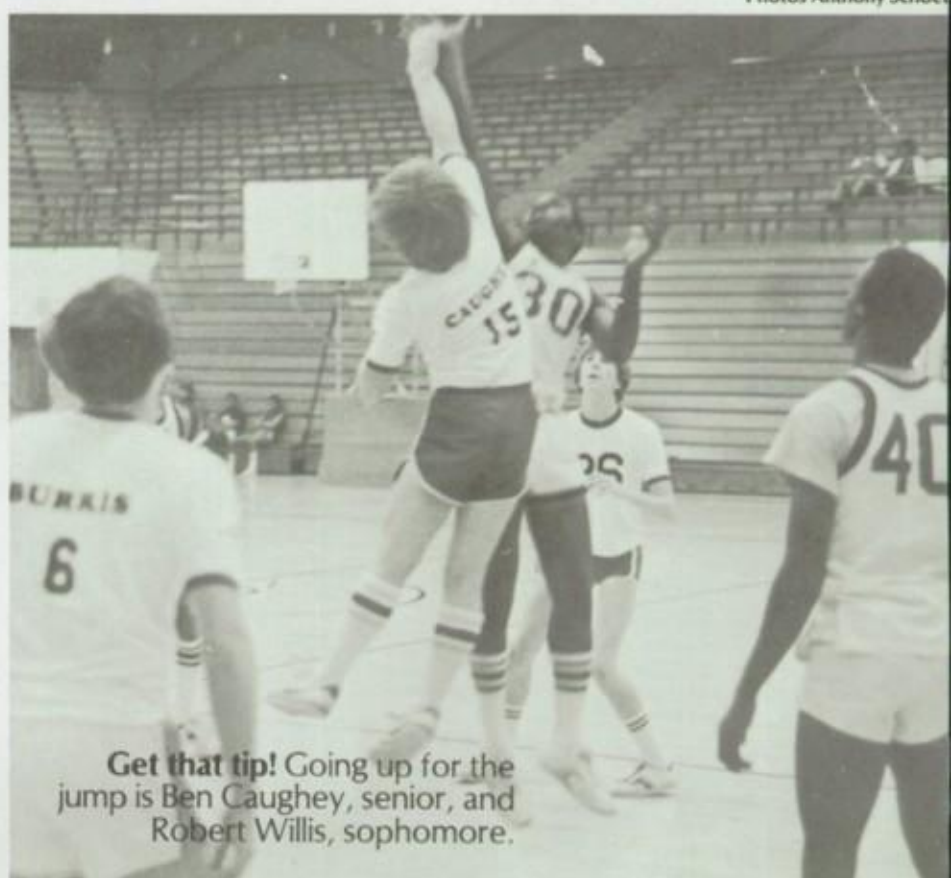

With the coming of the new year came the opportunity for boys who were not participating in school athletics to play intramural basketball. Intramurals served as a back door into sports for some of the boys.

"The boys have a lot of fun during the games. There is a lot of crying about some of the teams and referees, but they enjoy it," said Mr. Scott Fangman, sponsor. Mr. Terry Wright also sponsored the intramurals.

"Intramurals gives me the chance to get boys into sports," said Mr. Fangman.

Senior officers strive for spirit

After 11 long years of study, 343 students entered the halls of Southport to begin what is often called "the best year of their school life."

The class of '84 changed positions in school spirit as they climbed higher in class competition.

The challenge of bringing the class together for its last year is one responsibility of the senior class officers. The officers were Jill Collins, secretary-treasurer; Alice Starks, vice-president and Jeff Whittington, president.

"One of my goals as class secretary was to spread school spirit throughout the senior class," said senior class secretary-treasurer Jill Collins.

All the candidates for senior offices supported the same idea to make this class the best Southport has had. As the officers were chosen, promises of better spirit and togetherness were made.

One big responsibility of the officers was graduation. They introduced the class and gave speeches.

"We began as a hard-working class that worked well together. I feel we have worked better together this year than any of the years in the past," said president Jeff Whittington.

"I hoped to bring the senior class closer together," said Alice Starks.

"As the year progressed I could see that we had what it took to be the best," concluded Jill.

Drums allow creativity

"Music not only takes skill, but it takes concentration and ability," said senior Paul Bruner, drummer.

"I've played for 12 years. I like it because it allows me to be creative," said Paul.

In school Paul plays for the Symphonic Band, Jazz Band, Stage Band, and the basketball band.

"The reason I like playing the drums is because they are the key part of the band. They keep rhythm for all the other instruments," said Paul.

"I had an audition with Roadmaster right before they got back together again. They still needed a drummer, so I tried out. I was nervous, so when they picked me I was surprised. Unfortunately, because of school I had to turn it down," said Paul.

"It's too bad though, cause I could've been making $300 a week, for only three days work a week," said Paul.

Life offers challenges

Most people explore everyday challenges, but very few have had to devote a part of their life to exploration.

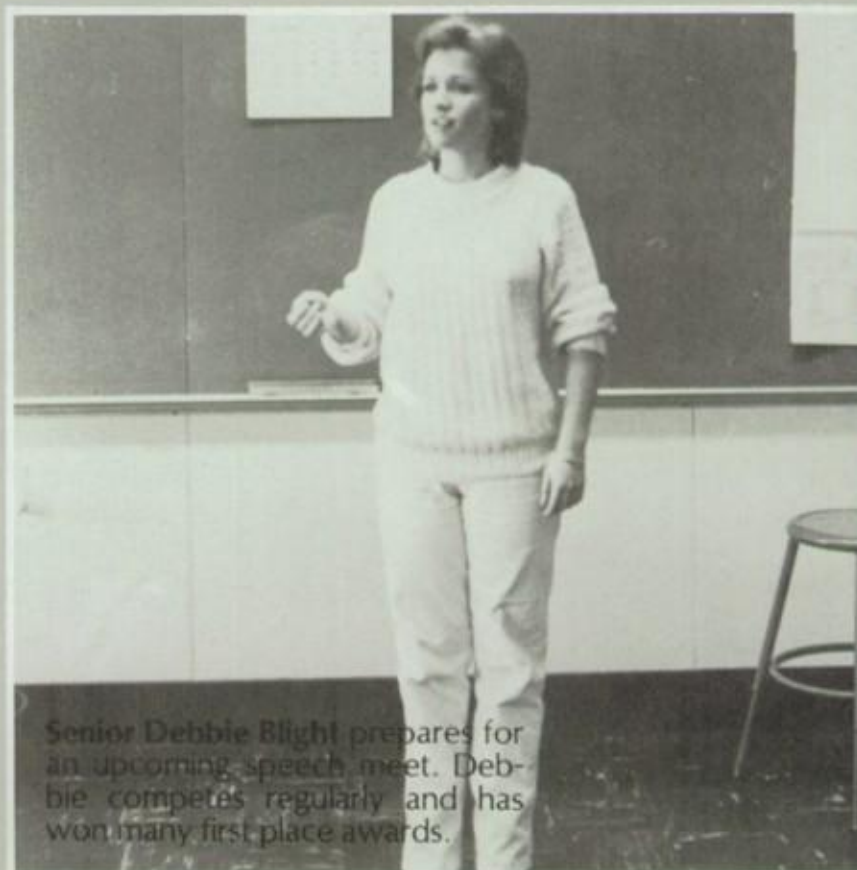

Senior Debbie Blight was faced with one great challenge, to start a new life in a new country. Debbie and her family moved to the U.S. the summer before her freshman year. "In the Bahamas, we were not required to attend school," said Debbie.

"My mom taught me everything I'd needed to know," she added. She also mentioned, "I really like school and all the activities. One which surprises most people when they learn I've never attended school before Southport is the National Honor Society," said Debbie.

Other than school, Debbie enjoys this country for other reasons. "One thing I've found about here is that more people are likely to just walk up to you on the street and start talking," concluded Debbie.

Juniors find challenge

The challenge of trying to win the class competition was fun, according to junior officers. The juniors received a first in the wall competition during "Pride Week." Their display depicted the history of the school's "rock."

"I was proud and honored to be the president of the juniors," said Gretchen Wagner. "I liked knowing that I was representing my class," she added.

"School spirit was a priority for me. I hoped to get everyone to participate 100 percent. In all, it was exciting," concluded Gretchen.

A major activity the juniors were involved in was planning the junior-senior prom.

"I had great plans for the prom, one which was to make it the best ever," said Angie Bashenow, secretary-treasurer. "My parents gave me a lot of support which helped me a great deal."

Phil Chamberlin, vice-president, said, "My goal was to get everyone involved. I enjoyed being officer this past year, and I've learned to communicate with people better," he said.

Class officers help through activities

"My sophomore year was exciting. I got a lot out of helping my class in all the activities of the year," said Stacey Layne, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Marva Bailey, sophomore counselor said,

Tom Gale, vice-president; Stacey Layne, secretary; and Mark Thompson, president helped the juniors place well in class competition.

"The class officers decorated various parts of the school for special events. They did a good job of boosting their class's spirit throughout the year."

The class officers strived to help the sophomores do well in all areas of the class competition. "I had fun working on the class ring sales especially," concluded Stacey.

Freshmen class officers were Angie Clay, Corey Taylor and Tara King. Their goal was to unite the freshmen class.

"I wanted to be a class officer so that I could lead the freshmen on to winning the class competition," said Corey Taylor, president.

Over 500 students began this year as freshmen. Not only were they the largest class in the school in number, but according to the class officers, "We've got the most spirit!"

Besides Corey, Tara King as vice president and Angie Clay as secretary led the freshman class.

"We worked on the freshman float for homecoming and took third place. We also worked on the stocking for the Christmas dance and collected over $70 for buying cards and gifts for the elderly and sick," said Tara.

One thing which is necessary for a good start is organization. "When I was nominated for class office my main goal was to help organize my class," said Angie.

Aside from winning the class competition, the freshmen were faced with taking classes which were new to them. One's freshmen year is the first year in which students are able to select all their classes.

"I liked being able to choose all my classes. I'll like it more though, when I am an upperclassmen and I can pick more electives," said Tracey Cosgrove.

"Being a class officer meant being able to meet more people in my class. That was important to me," said Tara.

Plans affect freshmen

The IDEA program, weighted classes and the plus and minus grading system were all new plans the freshmen experienced.

The IDEA program, sponsored by Mrs. Shirley Lynch, provided opportunity for gifted students to expand their knowledge of many skills.

"Weighted classes were ES classes which gave higher honor points for the grading scale," said Mr. William Pickard, assistant principal.

The plus and minus grades were sampled by all the classes, but because of class rank it was decided to be used only for the freshmen. This gave a clearer view on what grade the student was actually achieving.

Orientation class was required for all freshmen. It offers views on high school, college and the business world. Project Business, which included guest speakers from the business field, provided knowledge about how businesses are run and how to get into a business career.

Modeling career exciting

"I like modeling because of the glamour, the excitement, the make-up and the fashions. I like it most, because I like being in front of people," said Sonja Mahone, freshman.

Sonja began modeling when she was 12 years old and hopes to continue into a professional career.

In school she is involved in cheerleading and chorus. Outside school she dances, sings in a gospel choir and bowls in a junior league. She also participated in the Miss Black Expo Pageant.

Modeling is exciting, according to Sonja Mahone, freshman. She hopes to become a professional model after graduation.

"I got into modeling after I saw and answered an ad with Barbizon. They set up an interview, and I've been taking classes since then," said Sonja. She does both floor modeling and photo modeling. Barbizon is a national agency and school which help beginners get into modeling.

Sonja also added, "I'm taking cosmetology, and when I finish schooling at Barbizon I hope my cosmetology will help me in my modeling."

"My father got me interested in modeling, and now both my parents encourage me," concluded Sonja.

Administration succeeds

A staff of 104 teachers and administrators helped this year meet challenges and changes.

"We feel the changes all benefited the students. I'm really excited about the changes to come. I think they'll help," said Mr. William Pickard.

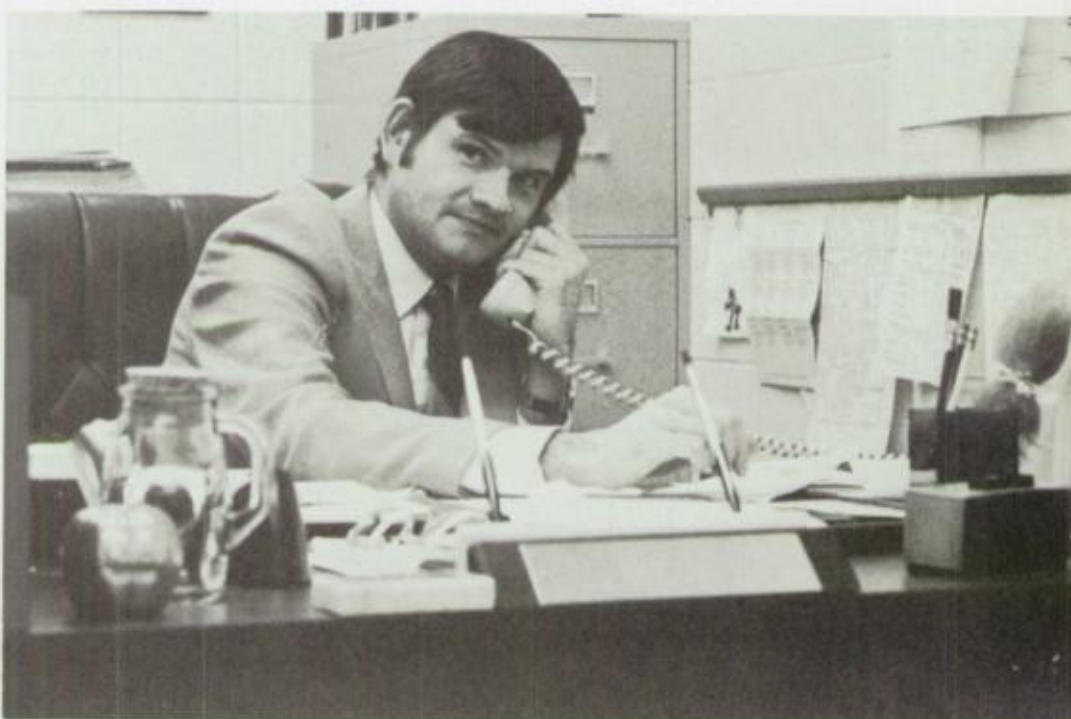

Mr. Daniel Bolin was named assistant principal in charge of student activities. "Even though my job was busy, I really enjoyed the work," said Mr. Bolin. Mr. Bolin had previously been the band director and music department chairman.

"Mostly my job dealt with attendance and discipline problems," said Mr. Steve Dildine, new dean of boys.

"School is a learning experience. We must teach the students so they can make the right choices as adults," concluded Dr. Lloyd Bodie, principal.

—Lorie Bowman

Brian Jones

One of Mr. Pickard's duties as assistant principal is student scheduling. He must start planning a year in advance before scheduling students in classes

Mr. Dan Bolin takes time to confirm plans for upcoming school events. Mr. Bolin is in charge of all student activities.

New dean of boys' Mr. Steve Dildine's day can get hectic. He also helped coach wrestling.

Teachers recall youth

"I was a perfect angel when I was in high school," said Mr. Mike Congleton, social studies teacher. Many teachers have memories of their high school days. Many things have changed, but several have remained the same. Many changes have occurred since the teachers were in school.

Some of the changes include dress, rules and student attitudes. Mr. Marvin Hawkins, social studies teacher, said, "When I was in school, the students were less independent and more disciplined."

One thing which has not changed too much are the dreams of students.

Everyone's dreams vary, but all students face the decision of what to do when they get out of school.

Miss Terrie Mahin, business teacher said, "I always knew I wanted to become a teacher." She also remembers being in the homecoming court her junior year. She said, "I loved being in the court. We all rode in convertibles in the parade."

Even though students sometimes have trouble seeing teachers in the role of student, all teachers were once there themselves.

Dart detects for fun

Getting up at 4 a.m. and driving for several hours is just the beginning of a long, adventure-filled day for Mr. Richard Dart, social studies department chairman, as he sets out to "metal detect."

Mr. Dart visits Civil War battle sites. "I go for the thrill of it. It's exciting to find something that has been buried for 121 years," said Mr. Dart.

He does not always detect alone. Mr. Terry Wright, another social studies teacher, sometimes accompanies Mr. Dart on his frequent excursions. "Sometimes Mr. Fangman and Mr. Hawkins (social studies teachers also), go along as 'diggers,'" said Mr. Dart.

"I have been going metal detecting for 10 years and have found many interesting things such as mini balls, belt buckles, cannon balls, and my favorite, a picketpin which was used to hold horses' reins the day the Civil War began," said Mr. Dart.

Through all the things he has collected he has learned a lot. "One thing that I've learned that is very evident is that man is awfully messy," noted Mr. Dart.

Teachers combine tasks

Coaching and teaching are both rough tasks, but to do them together is even harder. Mr. Steve Ingmire, business teacher and freshman football coach, is one who faces these challenges every day during football season.

"A key to a successful team is input from the athletes, coaches, and students, administration and the community," said Mr. Ingmire.

Miss Pat O'Connor, Spanish teacher and coach of girls' volleyball and basketball teams, takes on the same challenges between Aug. 1 and Feb. 9.

"Coaching is teaching. I expect the athletes to listen to and follow my instruction," said Miss O'Connor.

Mr. Dave Holman, biology teacher and wrestling coach, has to deal with his team 18 hours a week. As a coach, Mr. Holman thinks no one is indispensable.

According to Mr. Holman, the most important thing coaches can give their players is a sense of independence. "This helps them all through their lives," said Mr. Holman.

Whenever students are not feeling well, many rely on the school nurses for help. Mrs. Karen Melick and Miss Sharon Roach, public health nurse (not pictured) served Southport students' medical needs.

Many students rely on school-funded transportation to get to and from school. Without the 27 drivers, none would make it by bus. Mrs. Mary Nelson takes time to relax before the students enter her bus after school.

Anthony Schoettle

It seemed evident through the events which shaped the year that everything old really was new again.

Athletics seemed new with the completion of the new pool and auxiliary gym.

In celebration of the school's 90th anniversary, Jan. 21-27 was designated as Pride Week. A special telegram of congratulations was sent from President Reagan.

Education was a controversial topic as the state increased requirements for graduation which included plans for a longer school day.

Finally, an aspect which seemed old and new was the "rock" which has been in front of the school since 1977.

With each coat of paint, the rock, which symbolizes an old tradition, was transformed into something new again.

— Jean Cunningham

Everything old . . .

... is
again!

It seemed as though everything new was old again. We looked back on the beginning both of this year and of past years. The seniors remembered all the new feelings of being freshmen and realized those old feelings would be new again as some prepared to enter college.

Seniors were also experiencing new activities such as being able to vote, the coming of graduation and spending the last day at a school which had become a second home to many.

Teachers were looking back on the past year and forward to the summer and the prospects of a seven period day.

The juniors were feeling the excitement of becoming seniors and attending prom, and sophomores becoming upperclassmen.

Excitement filled the halls as the new feelings of spring arrived while long days and hot classrooms made the end of the year seem so far away.

Yet, as the end drew near, those old feelings were new once again.
